Forrester

Foreșter

To the members of the Forrester Family.

This is your copy of the "House of Forrester".

We send this book to you with only one claim, ie it is only a start.

We have almost enough material and data in the association files to fill another volume with the same number of pages as this. A good portion of this material came to us too late to be incorporated in this volume one, and allow us to meet the delivery dead line.

We are recommending to the members of the family, now in reunion, that we get out an annual edition each year until the work is complete. It is our hope that the family will elect to do this and that further research on the part of all of us, will enable us to discover and connect up the missing links in the lineage of the several branches.

There are no doubt some errors in the present volume, even though we have checked and rechecked several times. Our system is designed, however in such a way that errors and/or additions may be corrected in future editions of the work. Accordingly if by chance we have given you the wrong ancestor or the wrong heir-if you will notify the association we will try to correct the error.

We realize also that there is much interesting data about a number of persons which should be included in future editions. Since we have established a format you can see the kind of data we would like to record. It is our desire to record not only lineage, but also just enough intimate material to show future generations how our people lived, what they did, and what their contributions were to the civilization of our time.

Accordingly when you send this information in send something short, pertinent and descriptive of you, your branch, or your section of the country.

On order to carry on this work we will send out a reminder for annual dues of $4.00 per year per person on 1 Jan. each year. Also on Jan. 1st 1967 we will include a copy of the by laws of the association adopted by the membership at the Current Reunion. We will also include the names and addresses of the officers elected.

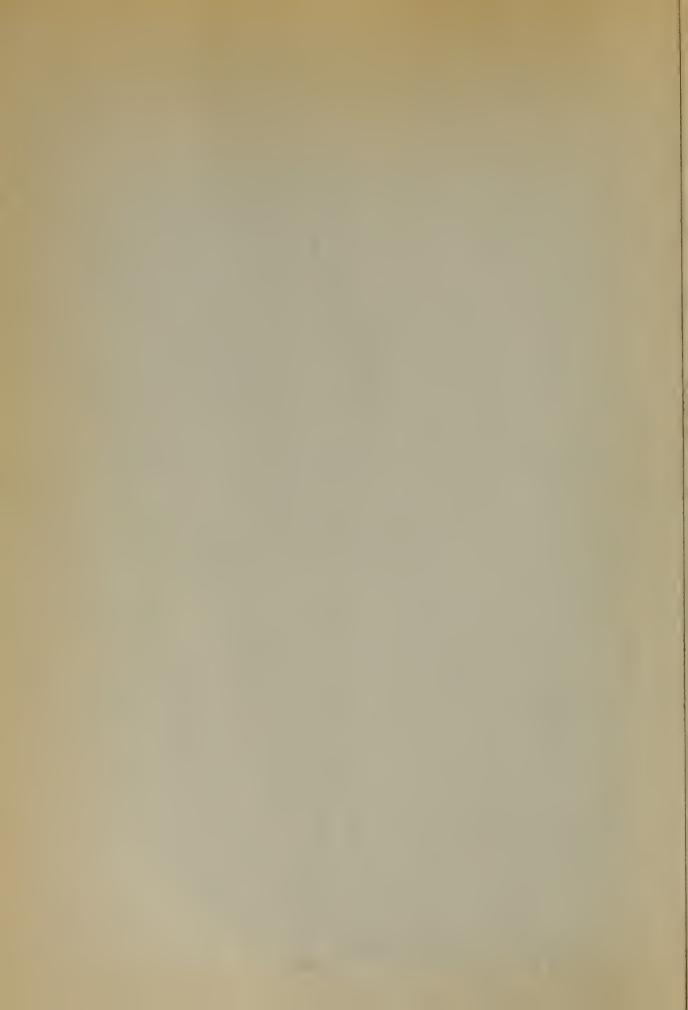

We hope you will like the book, if so write other Forresters about it and ask them to order books right away. We printed 200 books more than were sold and these are available on a first come. first served basis.

Annual Dues per Person Family $4.00
Price to Members of the Association 7.00
Price to Non-members 10.00
Plust 100 for Postage wrapping etc.
Yours truly,

The Bugles Call Callonwood Calif 96022

Lenealogist June 1967

In this changing world of the twentieth century, there seems to be also a change in our sense of direction, as well as a change in our sense of values. Due to economic pressures and change of circumstance brought about by the machine age, families are being separated as never before. This trend is accompanied by a corresponding deterioration of family affections and the ties that bind.

People throughout the land and all over the world seem to have lost their recognition of the family as being the basis of civilization.

Many years ago when mankind first appeared on earth, the family was, and is today, the basic stabilizing institution in the society of men. It was in the family that man's inherent instincts of character were developed. It was here around the family hearthstone sharing the hardships of life that man learned to love his fellows and to share with them the responsibilities of survival.

In return for these loyalties, the individual received the protection of the group, but what is most important, he was endowed with a sense of "belonging" so necessary to the well being of man.

These requisites, together with religion, have been the ballast down through the ages to strengthening man's purpose in life and promoting progress in the ethics of human behavior.

A proper reflection on these inate precepts prompts the invitation to gather once again around the "Old Mahogany Tree" and live again in the affections of our fathers of so long ago. But as we gather at the trestle board of our sires, let us partake of our heritage, of courage, wisdom and justice so profoundly portrayed by the history of our people.

The Echoes Tell We Will Keep the Faith

The motivation for these presents stems from our heed to the ancentral persuasion of the bugle's call.

At the same time, it is our hope that these transcriptions will never be complete. We hope that the HOUSE OF FORRESTER will stand forever as a living symbol of a great people who have made such worth while contributions to the establishment of all the important institutions in the progress of mankind.

As this call is dear to us, so will it be to those who follow.

When we who toil here are reckoned as antiquity, our seed will honor their fathers and keep their rendezvous with destiny and the everlasting challange of TOMORROW.

SECTION ONE

FORRESTER COAT OF ARMS

The large coat of arms shown on the preceeding page is one of five which have come down to us through many years since the origin of the name.

The first coat of arms is believed to have been very simple in design, and was painted on the shield of ancient chieftains so as to identify them in battle.

This coat of arms consisted mainly of an outline of a shield showing three bugles. At the top was a scroll showing the family motto at that time, which was , "Hunter - Bla-Yr-Horn"; at the bottom was a scroll showing the name, "FORRESTER".

As time went on, through many generations, and FORRESTERS performed deeds of valor on the field of battle, they were rewarded by their king, by being allowed to make certain additions to their Coat of Arms, each addition having a special significance.

In this respect, it is interesting to note that all the known FORRESTER Coats of Arms still feature the three bugles, or hunting horns.

It is believed that the design shown is the one carried during the Crusades.

MOTTO: "Si Fractus Fortis"

(Though Broken Brave)

ARMS: Argent: A Chevron Vert

between three Bugle horns

sable stringed gules

CREST: An arm embowered in Armor,

holding a broken tilting spear

NOTE: This Coat of Arms, in color, may be purchased, framed, from Morris Brothers, deVillers & Co., Inc., 254 West 34th St., New York 1, New York.

- 1. The different branches of the family are listed according to alphabetical designations, using the letters of the alphabet down through "Y" to differentiate between the several known branches of the family. The letter "Z" is used to give an identification to people not readily identified with a specific branch of the family. The people under "Z" are listed by states and countries, thus Ga Z-l, etc., Scotland Z-l etc. If in time it is found that Georgia Z-l is the son or daughter of A-10, then a note in the current edition would be made thus: "NOTE Ga-l issue of A-10" this would automatically tie all the people previously listed as being related to Ga Z-l to all the people listed under Line A.
- 2. The numerical components of a person's number have the following connotation:
- a) The "1" placed before a branch letter designation simply indicates that the person was born before 1 Jan 1772 (This date arbitrarily taken to separate ancient listings from current listings so that additions may be made on either end of the ancestral line).
- b) The number placed after the letter designation simply indicates the numerical order in which the person's name was placed in the record, as A-1, A-2, A-3, etc.
- 3. As research progresses, further new found members of a branch may be identified as follows:

Suppose that at some future date it is determined that l-A-l had a son or daughter other than A-l, and that he happened to be the father of E-l, then the notation in the current addition would be: NOTE l-E-l is the issue of l-A-l. This would immediately identify all members of line as having the same ancestral origin as all members of Line A.

4. This method of enumeration has been devised so that additions may be made in future additions to this Volume I, without having to disturb the continuity of the original recordings. If this method of enumeration is carried on, notations may be made in any future additions and will refer directly to a previous notation made in this Volume I.

Likewise, the method used will make it convenient for people doing research when corresponding with persons in different sections, if they refer to a number they will know that each of them are speaking of the same entry.

LEGEND

- * before a name indicates the person was in life on the date the section was typed. The * is ommitted when the fact was doubtful.
- + before a name indicates the person is a foster child.

Bur: Burried; Circa - abt.; M. Married; B. Born; D. Died

NOTE: First generation Forresters are listed alphabetically by the first letter of their first given name under "F" in the section on chronological listings. Others are listed alphabetically by the first letter of their sir names.

PREFACE

The Bugles Call

In this changing world of the twentieth century, there seems to be also a change in our sense of direction, as well as a change in our sense of values. Due to economic pressures and change of circumstance brought about by the machine age, families are being separated as never before. This trend is accompanied by a corresponding deterioration of family affections and the ties that bind.

People throughout the land and all over the world seem to have lost their recognition of the family as being the basis of civilization.

Many years ago when mankind first appeared on earth, the family was, and is today, the basic stabilizing institution in the society of men. It was in the family that man's inherent instincts of character were developed. It was here around the family hearthstone sharing the hardships of life that man learned to love his fellows and to share with them the responsibilities of survival.

In return for these loyalties, the individual received the protection of the group, but what is most important, he was endowed with a sense of "belonging" so necessary to the well being of man.

These requisites, together with religion, have been the ballast down through the ages to strengthening man's purpose in life and promoting progress in the ethics of human behavior.

A proper reflection on these inate precepts prompts the invitation to gather once again around the "Old Mahogany Tree" and live again in the affections of our fathers of so long ago. But as we gather at the trestle board of our sires, let us partake of our heritage, of courage, wisdom and justice so profoundly portrayed by the history of our people.

The Echoes Tell We Will Keep the Faith

The motivation for these presents stems from our heed to the ancentral persuasion of the bugle's call.

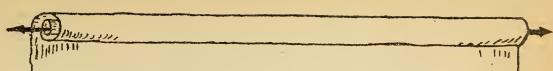

At the same time, it is our hope that these transcriptions will never be complete. We hope that the HOUSE OF FORRESTER will stand forever as a living symbol of a great people who have made such worth while contributions to the establishment of all the important institutions in the progress of mankind.

As this call is dear to us, so will it be to those who follow.

When we who toil here are reckoned as antiquity, our seed will honor their fathers and keep their rendezvous with destiny and the everlasting challange of TOMORROW.

AUTHOR'S NOTE

This book is intended to be Volume I of a series of compilations of FORRESTER genealogy and history.

When this work was first envisioned, Virginia Yeoman Forrester, Edward Forrester and I formed a Forrester Genealogical Association for the purpose of compiling and recording Forrester genealogy and history. This is a temporary arrangement. We felt that at the next family reunion, the family could and would formalize the organization and set up the mechanics to carry on the work.

We hope that this book will convey to you the spirit of enthusiasm with which this work was begun and that it will promote enough interest among all Forresters to assure the continuance of this project.

We began fully aware that tracing the ancestry of the several branches of the family would require several years of diligent effort and research. Since this is to be a continuous project, the book is loose leaf so that additions and corrections can be made easily. When enough progress has been made in research to warrant it, the book will be put in a permanent binding.

If the family elects to make the organization permanent, all Forresters may send in births, deaths, marriages and other vital information. This data will be recorded and published at suitable intervals. If the work is continued, a child born years from now may readily trace his ancestry to the head of his line from material already published.

Some of the material included here is documented; some is not. In all instances, however, the information comes from sources believed to be authentic. A preponderance of the listings comes from personal knowledge of people living at the time of this recording and is considered to be correct.

Let me remind you that this book is offered simply as a start; yet, in this first edition, there are hundreds of people listed. For this reason, it is impractical to prove births and deaths. We, therefore, accept the personal knowledge of living people as the highest and best evidence of the data recorded herein.

INTRODUCTION

Any family history must include some discussion of the origin of the name and coat-of-arms, for these things can tell us much about our beginnings.

Among the several spellings of the family name are FORRESTER, FORESTER, FORSTER, FORSTER, FORRISTER AND FORRESTIER, as well as some others. For the sake of convenience, we have elected to use the spelling FORRESTER for general reference. In the recording of specific people's names, however, we have used the spelling used by the source of information or that currently in use by an individual or family branch.

Which spelling is the original one is questionable. In Volume I, page 70, of The Complete Works of Sir Walter Scott, Sir Walter refers to a "Sir John FORSTER or more properly FORRESTER"; however, in Volume VIII, page 279, of Historian's History of the World, the spelling is given as FORESTER.

In this book, we have recorded a line beginning with Anacher who died in Flanders in 837 and is claimed by some to have been the originator of the name. (See Line A, Note.) He is listed as Governor of Flanders and the Great Forrester of France. The genealogy was compiled by William T. Foster of Washington.

It is interesting to note that 1-A-21, Sir Reginald FORSTER, was the son of 1-A-22, Sir Hugh FORRESTER. In the same line, beginning with 1-A-4 to the present, the spelling becomes FOSTER. It appears that these changes were made arbitrarily.

Many such changes occur in the following compilation. Notable among these is a will made by a certain William FORRESTER recorded in Will Book 4, page 226, of Richmond County, Virginia, where three distinct spellings of the name are recorded - FORRESTER, FORRISTER AND FORREST. In like manner, a will of Griffin FORRESTER recorded in Northumberland County, Virginia, Record Book 16, page 44, names his brother James FORESTER as one of his executors. Note the omission of an r by James. Why?

Several reasons can be cited for these changes in spelling. First of all, the lack of formal education among the populace in bygone days might be a chief factor. Most people spelled names as they sounded, and it is possible that individuals of the same branch may have varied the spelling of the sir name. Census takers, army personnel, clerics and other public officials most likely added to the confusion by misspelling names on public records. The distorted spellings on these records were probably carried on by later members of the family as education became more widespread.

Dialect and language also played some part. One thesis holds that the different spellings of the name were derived from the geographical area in which the various branches of the family lived. For instance, FORRESTIER is probably of French origin, while FORRISTER could be of German extraction. Suppose that FORESTER is English and that the Scottish branch of the family added an r for the sake of phonetic alignment with the Scottish dialect. Logic would tend to support this theory, but additional research may disprove it.

It has been a common belief among the family that all Forresters, regardless of the spelling of the sir name, are descended from a common ancestor. If, however, some thought is given to how names originated, common sense will tend to contradict this supposition.

Sir names came into vogue about the beginning of the twelfth century. Previously, only those persons who had distinguished themselves through service or achievement were given sir names. When sir names became popular for everyone, they were usually a designation of the person's vocation - Smith for blacksmith, Forrester for keeper of the forests or a description of a personal characteristic like Brown or White.

Of importance to us is the fact that each political subdivision generally had a forester, and according to the usual custom, each forest had a keeper. These keepers were replete with the usual trimmings; that is, anywhere from five to fifteen children. These children took the sir name Forrester, and so a lineage was started.

Let us suppose that the King of France and the King of England both appointed a keeper of the forests. There would be two families using the sir name Forrester in separate geographical areas. These families would obviously not be blood relations exclusively on the basis of name, although they could have been kin by reason of racial origin. (See Chapter 1, Part 2.)

There are at least six known Forrester coats-of-arms, some of which are shown in this book. Since all of them display the hunter's horn or bugle, they are most likely of the same origin.

Coats-of-arms came into use as a means of identification. Since suits of armor looked more or less alike, knights painted emblems on their shields to identify themselves on the battlefield. The custom began about 1200A.D. and flourished until about 1700A.D. At first, coats-of-arms were very simple, but as time went on, additions were made. These authorized additions were usually awards given by a king or lord for valor on the field of battle or for other meritorious service.

Only a direct descendent of an arms bearer is entitled to display the coat-of-arms; however, Americans of colonial descent on all sides can usually establish a line of direct descent from an arms bearer.

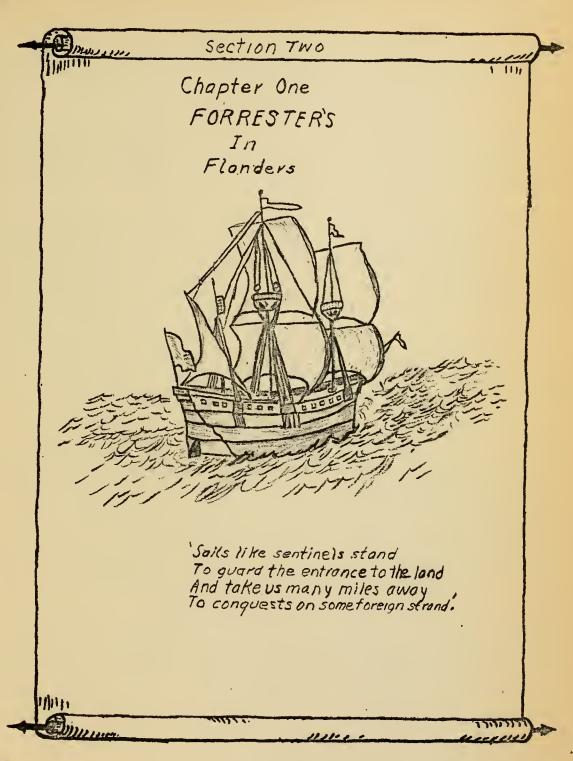

Since keepers of the forests were usually trusted servants of the king, it is likely that many Forresters were knights or squires and, therefore, arms bearers. Is is not unreasonable to assume that many of the people listed in this book are most assuredly entitled to display the coat-of-arms.

The origin of our sir name and the similar coats-of-arms tend to weld us all into a common bond. Whether or not there be any direct blood connection between some of the family branches has no particular bearing on our common purpose.

Our purpose is to gather and record Forrester genealogy of all spellings for future generations. We believe that our ancestors have contributed greatly to the progress of civilization and that the heritage they have left us must not be lost. We do not know where this search will lead us. We will simply have to follow the paths which our individual ancestors have trod.

Chapter I

FORRESTERS IN FLANDERS

The recorded history of the name FORRESTER goes back into antiquity for well over a thousand years, the name having originated in Flanders during the early eight hundreds. The racial origin of the people bearing the name is buried deeply in the early history of the Netherlands.

The Netherlands is a small triangle of land hemmed in by Germany, France and the sea. The earliest information on record about this land was handed down to us from the Romans. Julius Caesar refers to heroic savages who fought ferociously against the legions in the patriotic defense of their native land.

The Netherlands are now divided almost equally between Holland and Belgium. These low countries formed by the Rhine River are geographically and ethnographically a part of Gaul and Germany. The land was formed by three great rivers - the Rhine, the Maas and the Schelde. For countless ages, these rivers deposted their slime on the sand banks heaved up by the ocean around their mouths, making a delta inhabitable for man.

After entering this vast meadow, the Rhine divides into two branches, thus forming the island of Bativia. The Maas, rising in the Vosges mountains, flows through the Ardennes woods and finally joins up with the Rhine. The Schelde, rising in Picardy, flows through the present provinces of Flanders and Hainault.

These rivers flowing through this lowland and into the sea formed a great mass of swampland and spongy marshes. The aboriginal inhabitants of this land have never been positively identified. The record does not reach beyond the time of Caesar's Gallic wars. At that time, the left of the Rhine was inhabited mainly by tribes of the Celtic family. Celts, in all probability, also inhabited the island of Bativia. A large division of the Celt family had already overspread many portions of Asia Minor, Greece, Germany, the British Isles, France and Spain. They had long been settled in Belgic Gaul and constituted the bulk of the population.

Checked in the westward movement by the Atlantic Ocean, the Celts tended to flow back toward the lands of their origin; therefore, the Gallic portion of the population of the Netherlands was derived from the original race. The heart of the country was inhabited by a Gallic race, but the frontiers had been settled by Teutonic tribes.

There are several significant aspects of the settlement of these lowlands by these ancient people which are pertinent to the heritage of their descendents and to the study of the progress of civilization. They had to be of necessity a race of hardy and courageous people in order to survive in a land so destitute and fraught with natural obstacles antagonistic to survival. In addition, even though the land was comparatively uninhabitable, it was coveted by many people. The land was conquered by Caesar who stated that the Bativians were the bravest and most ferocious of all the German tribes. For almost 300 years, both before and after Caesar, the land was constantly invaded by the Northmen, people from the Scandinavian countries.

The hardships of the land and the invasions and wars tempered an already hardened and heroic people to take their place in the destiny of human progress.

Flanders today has lost its national identity and simply makes up two of the provinces of Belgium, but for centuries it was the forefront of European politics and commerce, far overshadowing England and rivaling France and the empire. Compared with Ghent, London was a third rate town.

England was then merely an agricultural district of small population. She furnished raw materials for the great industries of the Flemings, whose trade was the envy of the world, where rich men and women provoked the jealousy of kings and whose art, music and letters glittered over the whole continent. The Forresters who are descendents of these people are possessed of a heritage of leadership both in politics, industry and the arts.

Flanders began to rise out of hazy antiquity about the time of Charles the Great; however, the early history of its leaders is more or less obscure. The older chronicles sometimes give very different accounts. According to mythical legends, the first rulers of this land trace their ancestry back to Priam of Troy.

We find the founder of the family of FORESTER to be a certain Lideric le Buc. Lideric was the son of Saluart, Prince of Dijon. His mother was Madame Eringarde, the daughter of Gerard, Lord of Roussillon. Lideric is of doubtful authenticity, but his death in 836 is mentioned in the Annoles Blandinienses which was compiled before 1064 from earlier documents.

According to these earlier documents, Lideric had a son named Audacer. ²
Audacer was recognized merely as a cognomen for Baldwin, the next person in the genealogical series. With Baldwin, who was known as "Bras de Fer" or "Iron Arm", we finally reach the terra firma of history.

^{1.} This account differs somewhat from the genealogical listing in Line A of this book. In the interest of accuracy, we are recording both accounts. Further research could tie the two together.

^{2.} This could be the Anarcher mentioned in Line A.

Later, Baldwin persuaded his father-in-law to recognize him as Baron or Count of Flanders. At this time and for about 300 years before, the Northmen were ravaging the coast of Flanders and attacking the settlements along the river bank. In light of these circumstances, it seems plausible that Baldwin's father could have been occupying the countship of Flanders by force of arms; consequently, Baldwin's elopement with Judith was a matter of political expediency.

Baldwin Forrester II, born of this marriage and like his father, was a dynamic ruler. He is remembered in history as a vigorous opponent of the Normans and as the builder of the walls of Bruges and Ypres. He is also credited with laying the foundation of political liberties in his country by appointing twelve of his principle vassals as a council of state. He married Aelfthryth, daughter of Alfred the Great of England. This action showed that he had inherited some of the political acumen of his father.

After his death in 918, his possessions were divided between his two sons, Arnulf and Adolphus. Adolphus died very shortly, and Arnulf came into the entire inheritance. The reign of Arnulf was beset with trouble. He was constantly at war with the Normans on one hand and Emperor Otho I on the other. He made one of his conferences memorable by murdering William Longsword, the Duke of Normandy.

In his old age, Arnulf put the government in the hands of Baldwin III, his son by his wife Adelia, daughter of the Count of Vermandois. Baldwin, although his reign was a very short one, did a great deal for the commercial and industrial progress of the country. He established the first weavers and fullers of Ghent. He also instituted yearly fairs at Ypres, Bruges, Veurne, Cossel and other cities throughout the kingdom.

At Baldwin's death in 961, the old Count Arnulf resumed control and spent the few remaining years of his life in securing the succession of his grandson Arnulf, or Arnold the Younger. The reign of Arnulf was terminated by his death in 989. He was followed by his son Baldwin IV who was known as "Pulchra Barba" or "Comely Beard".

This Baldwin fought successfully against the King of France and Emperor Henry II and obtained Valenciennes, Walcheren and the Islands of Zeeland from Henry. The counts of Flanders thus became feudatories of the empire, as well as of France.

Baldwin's son, Baldwin V, rebelled against his father in 1028 at the instigation of his wife Adela, daughter of Robert of France, but two years later peace was made at Oudenards, and the old count continued until his death in 1036.

Baldwin V proved to be a worthy successor to his father. The people gave him the name or title of "Debonnaire".

^{1.} This lends some credence to the lineage listed in Line A.

There is, of course, an abundance of Flemish history following Baldwin V; some of it will be recounted here. Baldwin V and his descendents, however, are probably of more interest to English, Scotch and American Forresters.

Baldwin Forester V was an active, ambitious and enterprising man who greatly extended his power by wars and alliances. Before his death, he saw his daughter married to and sharing the throne of England with William the Conqueror. At the battle of Hastings in 1066, when William defeated King Harold II of England, Baldwin Forester was in command of the French troops. Sir Richard Forrester, the son of Baldwin V, was also with William at Hastings. He was knighted and given large holdings of land in Scotland. 1

After William ascended the throne, he gave an old English fort known as Etherstone to Baldwin. Baldwin later made the fort into a castle, and it was occupied for many generations by Foresters. With Baldwin settling at Etherstone and with Richard settling in Scotland, Forester roots were put down in the British Isles for generations to come. There is very little, if any, doubt that many of our American Foresters are direct descendents of Baldwin Forester V.

William the Conqueror's wife, Matilda Forester, evidently kept the Foresters close to the throne for many years. Foresters played an important part in the service of their kings in Britain and Scotland from 1066 until 1650 and in some instances even into the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. It is worthy of note that Matilda was the ancestral grandmother of every British king or queen from William the Conqueror down to the House of Stuart. 2

It appears that Baldwin V is the keystone or beginning of Foresters who settled in the British Isles; however, Baldwin had other children. Either they or their descendents played a prominent part in the affairs of Europe and the Middle East.

One of Baldwin's sons, Baldwin of Mons, in Dutch Bergen, married Countess Richelde of Hainault and brought this province into the power sphere of Flanders. Bladwin's elder son, Robert the Frisian, married Countess Gertrude and ruled the countships of Holland and Friesland in his wife's right.

Baldwin's younger daughter Judith married Tostic, brother of Harold II of England, who was defeated by William the Conqueror.

At the death of Baldwin V, Baldwin of Mons succeeded to the Countship of Flanders, apparently with the acquiescence of his brother Robert who was next in line to succeed Baldwin V. A few years later, a quarrel broke out, and Baldwin was killed. Robert then claimed the regency for Baldwin's children and was supported by the Emperor Henry IV. Richelde, Baldwin's widow, appealed to Philip of France. The issue was decided at Rarenchoren on February 22, 1071. Robert was the victor, and Arnulf III, Baldwin's son, was slain.

^{1.} Prominent American Families, Ga. Department of Archives.

Robert became Baldwin VI and reigned until his death in 1093. He was succeeded by his son Robert II, who became Baldwin Forester VII. Baldwin VII was given the name "A La Hache" or "With the Axe". He became famous for his exploits in the first crusade and acquired the title of "Lance and Sword of Christendom".

Upon the death of Baldwin VII, the countship went to Baldwin's cousin, Charles of Denmark. Charles was the son of King Canute and Queen Adelais, daughter of Robert the Frisian. Charles of Denmark was a religious enthusiast and exercised his powers against all wayward brothers and non-believers. At Bruges in 1127, he ordered all granaries to be thrown open during a famine. The merchants who had expected to profit by the emergency were so enraged that they arranged for Charles to be assassinated in the church at St. Donat.

After the assassination, there were six pretenders to the countship. Among these were William Clets, son of Robert Courtthone of Normandy, and Thierri or Theodoric of Alsace. Theodoric was the successful competitor. He married the widow of Count Charles, Marguerite of Clermont. He distinguished himself at home by the wise encouragement which he gave to the growth of liberty and abroad by the part he took in several crusading expeditions. In the later years of his life, he retired to Grovelines, leaving the cares of state to his son Philip.

When Philip came to rule in his own name, he followed in his father's footsteps and acquired the honorable reputation of the "Great Law Giver of Flanders". He married Elizabeth of Vermandois. While Elizabeth was on her deathbed, Philip had a violent dispute with the French monarch about the possession of Vermandois. Philip was ultimately granted Vermandois during his life. As he had no children, his inheritance went to Baldwin of Hainault, who had married his sister Marguerite.

This change in the dynasty considerably affected the relations of Flanders with France. The French king laid claim to the countship, and Baldwin was constrained to cede Artois, St. Omey, Lens, Hesdin and a great part of southern Flanders to France. He also forced Matilda of Portugal, the widow of Philip, to hold Lille, Casser, Veurne, Rille and Sluys. Marguerite died in 1194 and Baldwin in 1195.

The countship was inherited by their son Baldwin IX, who became founder of the Latin empire at Constantinople. In Constantinople, he was known as Baldwin I.

Baldwin was captured on April 14 in a battle fought against the King of Bulgaria and the Greeks. According to tradition, Baldwin was placed in a dungeon. The Queen of Bulgaria fell in love with him and offered to help him get out of prison if he would return to Flanders and marry her. This he refused to do.' The Queen then poisoned the King's ear against Baldwin.

On the occasion of a drunken debauche, the King had Baldwin brought before him and ordered that his hands and feet be cut off for the entertainment of the court. Being the gallant soldier that he was, Baldwin tried desperately to defend himself. His efforts were futile, however, and the king's orders were carried out. After his limbs were severed, his body was thrown in a ditch on the edge of town. He lived for three days and all that time was a prey for vultures. Afterwards, the King of Bulgaria made a drinking cup from Baldwin's skull which he used on festive occasions. The story relates that a pious female from Burgandy recovered the remains of Baldwin's body and gave them a secret interment.

As emperor of Constantinople, Baldwin was succeeded by Baldwin II, the son of Peter de Courtney.

Back in Flanders, Baldwin IX had died. Since his two daughters were both under age, the government of Flanders had been entrusted to his brother Philip. Philip was assisted by Eosschert of Avesnes and William of Hainault.

Johanna, the elder daughter, married Ferdinand of Portugal but left no heir. At her death in 1279, the countship passed to the children of her younger sister Margaret. There were two sons. The eldest was John by her first husband Bosschert of Avesnes, the second was Guy of Dampierre by her second husband William of Dampierre. John inherited the Countship of Hainault, while Guy became the Count of Flanders.

The government of Guy proved an unfortunate one. Flanders was involved in a war with France in which she came very close to losing her independence. The Count died in prison at Compiegne about two months after peace was concluded in 1305. His son, Robert of Bethune, was acknowledged as his successor by both the Flemings and the French. Robert was an able and valiant price and has the honor of having established the first insurance company at Bruges.

Robert's successor was his grandson, Louis of Nevers and Rethel. Louis had been brought up at the French court and had married Margaret, a daughter of the French king. His reign was made forever memorable by the enterprise of Jacob Van Arterelde, the great hero of Flemish liberty. Louis perished in the battle of Crecy and left his county to his son Louis II of Male, near Bruges, under whom the Flemish struggle for liberty was maintained.

By the marriage of Louis' daughter Margaret with Philip of Burgandy, the lordship of Flanders passed to the Burgundian family; thus, it ultimately became part of the possessions of the House of Austria.

The title of Count of Flanders has been held since 1840 by the second son of Leopold I of Belgium, Philip Eugene Ferdinand.

Thus, we see that Forester sprang from one of the prominent families of Europe and that its ancestry is buried deep in the origin of the Germanic peoples down through the Celts, Normans, Danes and from others who sparked the progress of modern western civilization.

Chapter II

AUTHOR'S NOTE

Some explanation of the genealogy cited in Chapter II seems necessary.

First of all, it should be understood by the reader that no definite proof exists that American Forresters are descended from the Corstorphine Forresters described in this chapter.

The first note in Sir J. Balfour Paul's Scottish Peerage states, "The first name on record (in Scotland) is a William Forrester, an Esquire, who appears in the muster roll of the Peel of Linlithgow in 1311-12, but the earliest authentic progenitor of the Lords Forrester was Adam Forrester a wealthy and influential burgess of Edinburgh."

The first mention of Adam Forrester is in 1361. Adam probably was a descendent of the William mentioned above, and William could have been, and no doubt was, a descendent of Richard Forrester to whom William the Conqueror gave large land holdings in Scotland after Hastings in 1066.

The record which we have indicates that the male line of descent from Sir Adam Forrester ran out with George, the first Lord Forrester. George resigned his title in favor of his daughter Joanna's husband, James Baillie. Baillie took the sir name Forrester and became the second Lord Forrester. However, it is certainly reasonable to presume that there were a number of Forrester males who were not in direct line of succession to Adam Forrester who could have left issue.

There are a number of things which suggest that American Forresters are descended from the Scotch, English and Irish Forresters. First, of course, is the fact that these groups represented the largest migration to the American colonies. The known records of Forrester immigrants tend to lead us back to the British Isles.

A second indication is the fact that many of the Christian names of the Corstorphine Forresters are still traditionally popular among American Forresters.

We know that the Forrester family and the Baillie family were closely connected in Scotland, for there two Forrester sisters married two Baillie brothers. It is ironic that again in America we find Baillies and Forresters intermarrying with a James Forrester marrying a Mazie (Mary) Baillie. Mazie was the granddaughter of Sir Mohr McIntosh, who was the son of Lachlin McIntosh of Knocknagle, Scotland.

Because the lineage of Sir Adam Forrester is so colorful and because it gives a comprehensive incite into the history of the British people, it has been recorded in narrative form rather than the form used generally in this book.

Chapter II

FORRESTERS IN THE BRITISH ISLES

As we have seen in Chapter I, a Forrester family came from Flanders to England with William the Conqueror after the Battle of Hastings. The descendents of Baldwin V apparently settled at Etherstone, and Baldwin's son Richard went to Scotland.

The Anacher line¹ shows Sir Hugh Forrester, son of Sir Richard, as being the governor of Etherstone Castle. Presumably, Sir Richard never did act as governor of Etherstone but went directly to Scotland.

Here again, we are confronted with confusing differences in spelling. Some references spell the Flanders Forresters with one r, while others use two r's.

We do know, however, that Forresters were prominent in English, Scotch and Irish history. The activities of some of these Forresters are vividly set forth in the transcription of Line A. Sir Hugh Forrester, governor of Etherstone, was a general of the English army in a war with the Normans in 1101; Sir Reginald Forrester was knighted by King Stephen of England for his generalship at the Battle of the Standard in 1138; Sir Hugh Forster, governor, was chief of the Royal Forests of England about 1152; Sir Hugh's son, Sir William Forster, governor of Etherstone, was commanding general of the armies which put down a rebellion in Wales in 1163.

The titled Forresters, in all probability, represent only a small segment of the respective families, since only the eldest son would inherit the titles and estates. Usually, the daughters were married by arrangement in order to add both political and economic power to the family. The younger sons were often placed in the clergy, the law or business. Many young men went to the army in order to be in a position to perform deeds of valor and thus gain titles in their own right.

In many instances, families would send their younger sons to other households among the gentry to act as pages and to be trained for knighthood. When they were proficient and if they had performed some service of merit for the nobleman, he would usually make the boy a squire, an ensign or bestow some other title on him. Some of these young men would become the armor bearer for the noble he was serving which was considered a position of honor.

Aside from training these young sons away from home, this arrangement had at least one other advantage. It gave the young esquires an opportunity to meet, know, and in many instances, fall in love with the girls of the household. Marriages among the nobility, however, had to have the sanction of the ruling king or queen in most cases. There is at least one instance of a marriage of this type among the Forresters which will be chronicled later.

Aside from deeds of valor on the battlefield, there were other Forresters who showed a fine characteristic for moral courage. A typical instance is a certain William Forrester, a minister of the Church of England. Because he would not pursue doctrines antagonistic to his principles, he was expelled from the Episcopacy of Scotland in the year 1638. This expulsion took place even though William was a man of large landed property.

After his expulsion, he returned with his family to Londonery in Ireland where he became rector of the Cathedral of St. Columby. He continued in this office until he died. His son Alexander succeeded him in office in 1676. William had two other sons, Matthew and William, but Matthew died in childhood. William moved to Coloraine and became Lord Mayor of that city. 1

Admittedly, we do not have the entire story, but from all accounts, the Forresters played a prominent and aggressive part in the border wars between the Scotch and English. The general tenor seems to suggest that they played "both ends against the middle", perhaps to their best interest. This conjecture is mainly based on the geography of the Forrester habitations.

The county of Berwick is on the Scotch side of the Tweed River, while the city of Berwick is on the English side of the river. Likewise, Bamborough Castle is on the eastern shore of England just south of Berwick City. ²

In "The Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border", Sir Walter Scott makes frequent references to the Forresters' activities and their places of residence. One stanza from the poem states:

"Of other clans I cannot tell,
Because our warning was not wide-Be this our folks hae ta'en the fell,
And planted down palliones, there to bide
We looked down the other side,
And saw come breasting ower the brae,
Wi' Sir John Forster for their guyde,
Full fifteen hundred men and mae."

^{1.} This genealogy was found on the last page of an old ledger, the property of and in the handwriting of William Forrester, who died about 1814.

^{2.} There are two spellings for this castle. That used in data submitted in Line A is Bamborough, while Sir Walter Scott uses the spelling Balmborough. All facts indicate both spellings refer to the same castle.

Sir Walter attaches the following footnote to the poem:

"Sir John Forster, or more properly Forrester, of Balmborough Abbey, warden of the middle marches in 1361, was deputy governor of Berwick and governor of Balmborough Castle. He made a great figure on the borders and is said on his monument at Balmborough Church to have possessed the office of warden of the middle marches for 37 years until his death. His line ended in the unfortunate Thomas Forster, one of the generals of the Northumbrain revolt in 1715. The estate became forfeit and was purchased by his uncle, Lord Crewe, and devised for the support of his magnificent charity."

Sir Walter also mentions a residence of Forresters, Stanegirthside, situated on the English side of the Liddel. Another reference gives and account of a battle in which a Forrester chieftain participated.

"The skirmish of the Reidswere happened upon the seventh of June 1575, at one of the meetings held by the wardens of the marches for arrangements upon the border.

Sir John Carmichael, ancestor of the present Earl of Hynford (Title extinct 1830) was the Scottish warden, and Sir John Forster held that office on the English middle march. In the course of the day, which was employed as usual in redressing wrongs, a bill or indictment at the instance of a Scottish complainer was fouled (a true bill) against one Fornstein, a notorious English freebooter. Forster alleged that he had fled from justice; Carmichael considering this as a pretext to avoid making compensations for the felony bade him "play fair" to which the haughty English warden retorted by some injurious expressions respecting Carmichael's family and gave other open signs of resentment. His retinue, chiefly men of Redesdale and Tynedale, the most ferocious of the English borderers, glad of any pretext for a quarrel, discharged a flight of arrows among the Scots. A warm conflict ensued in which Carmichael was beat down and made prisoner. Success at first seemed inclined to the English until the Tynedale men, throwing themselves too greedily upon the plunder, fell into disorder, and a body of Jedburgh citizens arriving at that instant terminated the skirmish in a complete victory of the Scots.

The Scots took as prisoners Sir John Forster, James Ogle, Cuthbert Collingwood and Francis Russel, the son of the Earl of Bedford and son-in-law of Sir John Forster, along with some of the Fenwicks and other border chiefs. They were sent to the Earl of Morton, then regent, who detained them at Dalkerth for some days, till the heat of their resentment was abated; which prudent precautions prevented a war betwixt the two kingdoms. He then dismissed them with great expressions of regard."²

There are other references and narratives of countless border clashes in which Forresters were involved.

The belief that in some instances the Forresters might have tried to carry force on both sides is to a great extent motivated by the practical consideration of their residences. As we have already seen, the Forresters were firmly entrenched on the English side of the border at Bamborough Castle, and the Earls of Corstorphine were for two or three hundred years just as firmly entrenched at Corstorphine just out of Edinburgh.

The sections "Scotland Z" and "England Z" show that hundreds of Forresters were scattered all through northern and middle England and southern to central Scotland.

Bamborough Castle being on the coast and Corstorphine enjoying a key position give rise to the speculation that Berwick and Bamborough might have provided an avenue for smuggled goods both into and out of Scotland. Such a traffic was entirely consistent with customs of that time; however, it was usually carried on with the tacit approval of the ruling monarch of the country. Since Forresters at that time were in favor both in England and Scotland, it could well have been a lucrative business.

That the Forresters were in the forefront of things in these areas is amply set forth in recorded history of the family. Particularly in Scotland, the Forresters were intimately connected with church, state and business.

The first Forrester on record in Scotland, supposedly a descendent of Sir Richard Forrester, brother-in-law of William the Conqueror, is William Forrester, an esquire, who appears in the muster roll of the Peel of Linlithgow in 1311-12. The next is an Adam Forrester. Whether or not Adam had any connection with William is conjectural, but Adam evidently was William's son, as Adam is found in 1264 to possess a charter of half the lands of Whitburn in Linlithgow.

Adam Forrester was a wealthy and influential burgess of Edinburgh. He had, in addition to the above land in Whitburn, a grant of the customs south of the Forth on March 17, 1361-62; a confirmation of a grant to him by William Seaton of two carucates of land in Villa de Nodreff (Niddry), in the same constabulary, October 23, 1369; a confirmation of a grant to him by Alexander de Straton of the lands of Castlecary, County Edinburgh, December 7, 1376; and on the same day a confirmation of a grant to him by William More of Abercorn of the lands of Corstorphine. He had a charter from James Douglas, Lord of Dalkeith, of the lands of Fairliehope, County Peebles, March 16, 1377. He had a grant from King Robert II of twenty merks from the burgh mails of Edinburgh in excambion for a similar sum from the customs of that burgh December 28, 1379, and a renewal of this grant.July 4, 1383. Among others, he also received a grant to a tenement in Edinburgh of the hostilagia of Traquair, County Peebles. On the resignation of Henry de Wyntoun and Amy Broun of June 25, 1382, he received a grant of the Wrychtishouses near Edinburgh.

The Wrychtishouses was pulled down in 1800 to make place for James Gillespie's School in Gillespie Crescent. Every window of the mansion was adorned with armorial bearings in stone as a durable memorial of the family tree. One of these segmental stones, showing the arms of the Forresters and the Napiers, is to be found built into the archway of the approach to the mansion of St. Margaret's, North Queensferry.

Like many other burgesses of note in Edinburgh, Adam Forrester lived in a wynd off the High Street. Being a man of great affluence and the owner of considerable property, he became adept at handling administrative affairs. So ably did he apply his talents in this direction that he was made alderman of Edinburgh in 1373, the year before he bought Corstorphine, and the city fathers returned him to office in 1378.

The following year was the turning point in Adam Forrester's life. His king was to claim his services for the future. He was given the crown appointment of custumar in 1379. Among other duties, he levied customs on two of the chief Scottish exports, wool and hides. He was allowed to import grain from England free of duty.

It was common knowledge that a great drain on the Exchequer was the yearly installment of 4,000 merks which Scotland, already bled white, had been paying to England since King David II had been released in 1357. In the original agreement, the ransom of 100,000 merks was to be paid in ten yearly installments. The first installment was due June 25, 1358. The ransom was not fully paid until 14 years after the death of the king.

Edinburgh was partly responsible for the ransom, and the city fathers, desperate for money, depended heavily on Adam Forrester as their unofficial banker. At the same time, King Robert II, whose throne was none too secure, was bribing his turbulent nobles to such an extent that he was also required to lean on the custumar even for his private purse. One of these transactions is recorded in one of the oldest deeds in the city's archives.

For a loan of 100 pounds Scots, the King granted Adam Forrester "an annuity of twenty merks of sterling from the custom of the said burgh...until we, or our heirs, infeft the said Adam or his heirs, in twenty merks of land in any proper place". As the term "or his heirs" is used, the word "annuity" had not then the same significance that it has nowadays. In fact, the annuity payments were made for many years after Adam's death.

In 1385, war broke out with England. Edinburgh was reduced to ashes. The old kirk of St. Giles suffered severely. Only part of its central tower was left to show where it stood. This church and Corstorphine were both restored. The repair of both churches reflects the handiwork of Adam Forrester, for he was entrusted with the work on both of them.

Probably Adam Forrester's own town house was destroyed when the town was sacked by the army of Richard II. The house stood less than 200 feet from St. Giles. The city plan of 1385 shows that his house had a large garden like the other fine tenements on the west side of the wynd. Adam Forrester evidently rebuilt his house, as the charter of 1429 refers to his house being occupied by Lady Margaret Preston.

When Robert III was crowned at Scone in 1390, Parliament voted to give Queen Annabella a separate income. Adam Forrester was appointed her Chamberlain as well as Keeper of the Great Seal of Scotland. In the first year of Robert's reign, a French ambassador arrived in Edinburgh for the purpose of renewing a treaty against England. When this incident came to the attention of King Henry IV, he disputed the right of the Scots to enter into any treaty; however, his advance on Edinburgh with a large army was largely futile because of the "scorched earth" policy which was adopted by the Scots.

King Robert depended heavily on Adam Forrester throughout his entire reign. If the king required a diplomat to represent him at the English or French courts, Adam was almost certain to be the King's choice. Adam, with his cavalcade of 30 or 40 horsemen, was given safe conduct on these missions on as many as 14 occasions.

A dramatic incident typifying Adam's character took place toward the end of his life. One day in September of 1402, he donned his armor and rode off for a wild adventure which turned out to be a famous border raid ending in the Battle of Homildon Hill.

The English were victorious. Henry IV and Adam Forrester must have felt the situation awkward when Adam appeared before the king in the unaccustomed role of prisoner. The Scottish nobles chose Adam as the group's spokesman. Considering the fact that the Scots were on the wrong side of the border, it is ironic that Adam reasoned in his speech before Henry and the English Parliament that peace should be made between the two countries "in order to stop the effusion of Christian blood". The prisoners were released with the exception of the Earls of Douglas and Fife.

On his return to Scotland, Adam was knighted. Seemingly, this would indicate that Adam, although he may have been a younger son or grandson, was not in direct succession to Richard Forrester who was knighted by William the Conqueror.

Sir Adam was one of the commissioners appointed to arrange a truce between France, England and Scotland in 1404; however, his health probably did not permit him to carry out this last duty for his country.

After acquiring the land of Corstorphine in 1376, Sir Adam founded a chapel, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, in connection with the parish church there.

In the meantime, in a quiet province between his frequent embassies, Sir Adam was able to give serious thought to the planning of his proposed castle at Corstorphine.

It is said that geography is the mother of history; therefore, let us see what geography produced when Sir Adam decided on the site for his castle. The site today is recognized as the land just a few yards to the southeast of the southern entrance of St. Margaret's Park.

Adam's first consideration was for defense. There was no friendly castle near at hand as at Nether Liberton. He felt, however, that the castle would be well guarded on the west side by a marshy loch as large as that of Duddingston Loch, which lay before the windows of his mansion house at Nether Liberton. To the south lay marshes spreading across to Saughtonhall, and on the east by another loch which filled the hollow below the hill to the lands of Gorge and Saughton, with an outlet stream to the water of Leith. On the north was the real danger zone, for his fortress could be reached by the road beyond the neighboring townships. Far in the distance his gaze rested upon the massive rock upon which Edinburgh Castle was perched, and then on the wide panorama of the Pentland Hills, and the glamour of it all was like a benediction to his soul.

Sir Adam now set his men to build a castle on a scale appropriate to his wealth and standing. The stones for the building were taken from the freestone quarry on the north side of Corstorphine Hill. Over the hill paths, later known as the green carriage drive and the old kirk road, the stones were conveyed on the backs of sturdy horses, and the mortar was carried in baskets. Considering the arduous mode of transport and the slow thorough way of working in those days, the building of the castle probably required ten years. It was finished about the end of the fourteenth century.

Not a vestige of the castle stands today, but there does exist a description and a few measurements taken about 1800 which show the cluster of ruins as they appeared then and give some idea of the style in which Sir Adam lived.

It is definitely known that the castle had curtain walls 100 feet long, and at each corner a tower probably 40 feet high rose to the sky. Each tower was 21 feet in diameter externally and had arrow slits for defense. Against the north curtain wall was the castle proper consisting of a central tower of great size and strength. The center of everything was, of course, the hall on the first floor. Its high pointed barrel roof revealed a national characteristic in that it differed very little from the roof of a chancel or nave. At the upper end of the hall was a wide fireplace behind the low dais on which the high table was placed for the use of the lord and his lady.

Below the dais, dried rushes gathered from the marshes near at hand were spread on the floor, and the retainers partook of their food at the long trestle tables there. On one side, an oriel projected, its windows being continued lower than the others to give more light to the serving table where the meat was carved. Knives and hands were used at the meals. There were no forks. Everything was, done in the hall - cooking, eating, living and sleeping. Privacy was out of the question, until a new departure was made, when the lord and his family were no longer willing to sleep in the hall but in separate rooms entered from above the dais.

Across the end of the hall was a gallery where the minstrels played when feasting took place in the evenings. Above the rooms for sleeping were the turrets for defense. On the ground floor were girnels for storing grain, malt and meal, and beneath were the dungeons for prisoners. The curtain walls, forming a quadrangle, surrounded the courtyard, and against these walls were built the stables and other necessary stalls. The entrance to the castle was on the north side, and a drawbridge spanned a wide moat which could, at will, be flooded from the adjacent Corstorphine loch. The loch was also useful for bringing in provisions by boat from the Cowes Brigge, now known as Coltbridge.

No feudal lord's establishment was complete without a dovecot. It was his privilege to let his pigeons feed upon his neighbor's crops as well as his own. The ancient dovecot erected by the Forresters had 1,000 cells for birds, and its massive walls were topped by stone slabs akin to the church roof. To this day, the church tower is the favorite haunt of the pigeons.

As in many other instances, the dovecot of the Forresters has survived their castle, perhaps by chance, but it may be due to the old superstition that if the dovecot were pulled down, the lady of the house would die within a year.

Within a stone's throw of the dovecot stands the famous sycamore tree. It is 73 'feet high and 13 feet in circumference. Tradition says that a sapling was brought by a monk in the early fifteenth century and that it marked the end of the avenue leading to the castle.

Sir Adam Forrester lived in an age when the noise of the hammer and chisel of the masons was continually heard throughout Scotland in the building of university, cathedral, church and castle. He followed the natural bent of the Scot by giving practical shape to his thoughts of the hereafter now that he had the pride and pleasure of his completed castle.

It appeared that there was not enough room for him and his family to have the honor of being buried within the sacred precincts of the old parish church; therefore, he received permission to erect a chapel, with sacristy, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, in the churchyard at right angles to the parish church. As the chapels at St. Giles show, he was no apprentice at such a job.

Space here will not permit a detailed description of the construction of this chapel, but it might be remarked that the inside walls were finished in plaster and colored red and sable, the Forrester colors. A canopied sedilia was recessed into the south wall to accommodate the three officiating priests or chaplains while they awaited in turn to pray daily, according to a charter of 1425, for the souls of James, the King of the Scots, and for his consort Johanne, and for Adam Forrester, knight, and his spouse Margaret Forrester, and their ancestors and descendents.

The exterior and the interior of the chapel and sacristy, now the chancel and vestry, have to this day a quaintness of beauty which never loses its charm, and it is with a sympathetic feeling which bridges the ages that one can join in the quiet satisfaction which Sir Adam Forrester and his lady must have experienced in 1404 when they viewed the fabric of his dreams.

Sir Adam was at last happy of a full and tempestuous life. The king had just appointed him Chamberlain for the southern division of the kingdom, but Sir Adam's health broke, and he died on October 13, 1405, leaving an honored name among men.

His body was laid to rest in front of the high altar of the chapel, but the grave slab has not been allowed to lie undisturbed. The ancient stone with its scarcely decipherable incription beginning "Hic Jacet Adam Forster" has been set into the outside wall of the church porch probably during the addition to the church in 1646.

Sir Adam Forrester was married twice. His first wife Agnes was the daughter of John Dundas of Fingask, and his second wife was Margaret. Sir Adam had the following children:

- 1. John, who succeeded him and founded the church at Corstorphine.
- 2. Henry or Thomas, who had a charter from his brother Sir John for the lands of Drylaw, County Edinburgh, August 20, 1406. 1
- 3. Marion, who married Andrew Leper, burgess of Edinburgh. Andrew died about March 5, 1400, and his father-in-law Sir Adam was served his heir May 2, 1402.

Sir John Forrester of Corstorphine was served heir to his father on November 6, 1405. He took a leading part in public affairs and held the office of Deputy Chamberlain south of the Forth in 1405-06. On December 30, 1407, he had a confirmation of a charter by Henry St. Clair, Earl of Orkney, of an annual rent of twelve merks out of the lands and coal mines of Dysart in consideration of an advance by him to the Earl of 300 gold nobles, English money. On March 3, 1407-08, he had a confirmation of a charter to himself and his wife Margaret by Sir John Drummond of Cargill of the lands of Ochtertyre, County Stirling.

He was one of the commissioners sent to England to treat for the release of King James I in 1416 and was made Keeper of the Great Seal by the Duke of Albany when he became governor in 1420.

Sir John's most worthy accomplishment was the founding of the collegiate church at Corstorphine in 1429. While the younger generation of the Forrester family was uniting with noble houses, a lady of the older generation unknowingly became a benefactress to the people of Corstorphine for centuries to come. Dame Margaret Forrester, mother of Sir John, planned to add to her late husband's foundation to his chapel by giving 250 pounds Scots yearly for the maintenance of two more chaplains and two choir boys.

^{1.} Some references give the name of the second child as Henry, others as Thomas.

The details of his life, however, are in agreement.

The inspiration came to Sir John to enlarge upon his mother's intentions, and he conceived the idea of establishing a collegiate church instead. Negotiations with the Pope covering several years ensued, but eventually Sir John was allowed to establish the church, and he endowed it richly with annual annuities of 120 ducats in gold.

There is much which could be said about this old church which was built on the foundations of an old and ancient church originally built by the Normans. The Corstorphine church stands today, and to see it is a must for any Forrester visiting Scotland. The tombs of the founder and many of his descendents are to be found there.

These tombs are the most striking monuments in the church. There are fine recumbent effigies of the Forresters. Time worn though they are, the tombs show evidence of being masterpieces in their day. As Scotland had close links with Holland in far off days, one feels there is some truth in the tradition that the sculpture work was done by Dutch artists in stone. Whatever be their nationality, the artists gave such meticulous care to detail that a true idea of the human prototypes is presented.

The founder's tomb is on the west side of the chancel behind the manse pew. Sir John Forrester is represented as wearing a fifteenth century close helmet with laminated chin piece. He is clas in plate armor with hands crossed on his breast over a shield bearing three hunting horns. His feet are in laminated sabbatons and rest on a lion. Imagine the rich effect obtained when the effigy was colored red and sable, part of the armor being picked out here and there in gold.

His wife wears an enriched chaplet and a pearled wimple on her brow. Around her neck is a gold chain with locket. Her dress is a one-piece garment with sleeves caught at the waist with an embroidered belt and surmounted by a cloak. Her hands, crossed over a book, rest on her breast. Each finger has a ring. Her feet rest on a small animal with an enriched collar. All was suitably colored.

Above the archi-volt of the tomb are a helm and shield. In front of the table are five cusped panels, each with a shield. Numbers one, three and five are charged with the Forrester horns. Number two from dexter impales Forrester with St. Clair, for his wife, and number four impales Forrester with Stewart, another wife.

The Forrester arms were argent, three hunting horns sable, stringed gules. The crest is a dog's head erased. Their motto was "Hunter bla yr horn".

The founder's son John and his wife are represented by the effigies on the right side of the vestry door. The material used is marble. The head of this Sir John was destroyed by Cromwell's troops. The body is clad in plated armor of a date later than his father's. Over the armor is a cloak. The corselet, cuisses and jambards are keel-shaped. An enriched baldric encircles the thighs and supports a sword. The hands are folded on the breast over a napkin. The knee pieces are particularly massive. The spur chains are enriched. The whole impression of this figure is that of the herculean.

His wife wears a chaplet and wimple, and her body is clad in a flowing gown which falls in folds and is gird by an enriched belt. She also wears a sideless cotehardie enriched. Over all is a cloak, fastened by a cord at the shoulders, and on this her hands are crossed. On the forearms are sleeved mittens enriched.

There are other Forresters buried in a similar manner in the church.

Sir John was one of the commissioners sent to England to treat for the release of King James I in 1415 and was made Keeper of the Great Seal of Scotland by the Duke of Albany when he became Governor in 1420.

In 1423, he had a safe conduct passport to go to Durham to meet King James I on his return from captivity. In June 1424, he had a safe conduct pass to go to Flanders for a year, but whether or not he went is uncertain. He probably stayed at home with the young king, with whom he was a great favorite and by whom he was appointed master of the King's Household.

On July 10, 1426, a whole series of charters was granted to him. These charters were confirmations, first, of the sale to Sir John Forrester by John Murray of Ogleface of the lands of Badlormie, County Linlithgow; second, of the wadset of twelve merks from Dysart mentioned above; third, the lands of Corstorphine, Drylaw, Nether Liberton, Meadowfield and Clerkington, all of which were united into the barony of Liberton; fourth, of the sale of an annual rent of 100 merks made by Sir John Seton from the lands in Longniddry.

On the death of the Earl of Buchan at the Battle of Verneuil, August 17, 1424, his office of Chamberlain was bestowed on Sir John Forrester. On March 2, 1424-25, he founded a chaplainry in St. Giles, Edinburgh, for the souls of the king and queen, his own father and mother, and his deceased wife Margaret. On February 24, 1425-26, the king founded three chaplainries in Corstorphine church for the souls of the same persons and granted Forrester the patronage of the chaplainries.

Sir John was one of the jury in the trial of Murdac, Duke of Albany, in May 1425. On June 25, 1429, Sir John was named as John Forrester, Baron of Liberton, one of the Scots commissioners for a truce with England, and on July 12 in the same year, he appends his seal to an indenture settling conditions for the observance of order on the marches, his arms being simply a hunting horn stringed.

On February 4, 1430-31, he had a royal charter of the lands of Corstorphine, Drylaw, Nether Liberton, Meadowfield and Clerkington to himself, with the remainder to his eldest son John, his sons Henry and John (secundus), and his own brother Thomas or Henry and the heirs-male of their bodies, whom failing, to his own nearest and lawful heirs.

The date of the death of Sir John Forrester is uncertain, but he is believed to have died in 1448. This is the last mention of him as Chamberlain. He was buried in Corstorphine church, where the recumbent effigies previously described of him and one of his wives are still to be seen.

Sir John married first a lady whose Christian name was Margaret, but nothing more is known of her; second, Jean, daughter of Henry St. Clair, Earl of Orkney; third, in or previous to 1422, he married Marion, daughter and heir to Sir Walter Stewart of Dalswinton. Marion was the widow of Sir John Stewart of Jedworth, who died before October 23, 1420. On this date, his widow resigned the lands of Carnsalloch in favor of Sir Herbert Maxwell. In 1422, Sir John received in his wife's right her terce, payable from the customs of Linlithgow. Two years afterward, with the consent of her husband, Marion made a donation to a prebendal stall in the cathedral of Glasgow.

Sir John had the following children:

- 1. Sir John, who succeeded.
- 2. Henry, who had confirmation on October 28, 1425, of the lands of Incheranthnyne and Oxgangis, County Edinburgh, and of Auchindenny and others in the same county. On February 23, 1425-26, he had a charter of the lands of Kilbaberton. He was latterly styled of Niddry. He married Helen, daughter of John Fairlie of Braid, and with her had a charter of the lands of Bavelaw, January 1426-27. They had issue:

- (1) John, who married Elizabeth de Moravia, and with her had a charter of certain lands in Dechmont and Kilbaberton, June 28, 1459-60. He is styled of Niddry, February 25, 1492-93. He sold Dechmont in 1505.
 - (2) Archibald, witness to a charter, December 24, 1506.
- 3. Elizabeth, married to Sir Alexander Lauder of Halton, and with him had a charter of the lands of Westhall and North Raw in the barony of Ratho, December 17, 1408.
- 4. Janet, married Robert, afterwards second Lord Maxwell. On January 13, 1424-25, she and her husband had a grant of the lands of Libbertoun in the barony of Carnwath. She was living in 1488.

John Forrester of Corstorphine, the eldest son, had a charter of the lands of Blackburne, County Linlithgow, February 4, 1424-25. Not much is known of his career, but it is said that he distinguished himself more in the field than in the cabinet and that he took part in the struggles between the Douglases and Chancellor Crichton and Sir Alexander Livingston. In 1443, he was with William, Earl of Douglas, when he destroyed Crichton's castle of Barnton. In retaliation, Crichton harried the lands of Corstorphine and leveled Forrester's house with the ground.

Sir John is said to have died about 1454, when Patrick Lesouris, rector of Newton, founded a chaplainry in St. Giles for the souls of James I and II, the late Sir John Forrester of Corstorphine and others; but this probably applied to his father, as Sir John, the son, is mentioned as having certain fines remitted in Exchequer in 1456. He was buried at Corstorphine Church where his tomb still remains.

Like that of his father, his tomb has effigies of himself and his wife, whose name is unknown, but whose arms, a bend engrailed, appear impaled with those of her husband. He had by his wife, apparently, one son and one daughter:

- 1. Alexander, who succeeded.
- 2. Isobel, married as his first wife, Sir James Edmondstone. The marriage was ultimately annulled, and she renounced her appeal against the sentence, February 3, 1546-57.

Sir Alexander Forrester of Corstorphine, probably the son of the foregoing, was granted a charter in 1450 to which Henry Forrester of Niddry, his uncle, and Gilbert Forrester of Drylaw, his cousin, were witnesses. Sir Alexander also appears as witness to a charter of David, Earl of Crawford, February 26, 1463-64.

He sat in Parliament January 13, 1463-64. He was dead before September 20, 1473, when William de Camera, vicar of Kirkurd, founded a chaplainry at the altar of St. Anne in the church of Corstorphine for the souls of Kings James II and III and Sir Alexander Forrester. His wife's name is not known, but he had issue:

- 1. Archibald, who succeeded.
- 2. Matthew, who had a charter of the lands of Barnton from his brother March 1, 1487-88. He married Christian, sister of Patrick Bellenden of Auchnoule. They are mentioned January 21, 1494-95. Their son John had a precept of clare constat as his father's heir April 24, 1500, and sasine thereon in the following month.
- 3. Margaret, married first before June 16, 1470, John Stewart of Craigiehall; second, Robert Ramsey of Cockpen. He was alive in 1488.
- 4. Janet, married William Touris, eldest son of Gabriel Touris.

Archibald Forrester of Corstorphine must have been of mature age in 1482, when he apparently parted with the castle and barony of Corstorphine in favor of his son Alexander, who had a charter of these subjects from the king. The life rent, however, was reserved to Archibald and his wife, and on January 2, 1493-94, he made a similar resignation without reservation of the life rent of the lands of Thirlestane, County Berwick. On December 16, 1475, Hugo Bar founded a chaplainry in Corstorphine for the souls of King James III and Queen Margaret and Sir Archibald Forrester of Corstorphine, but the latter did not die until 1512 or 1513.

Archibald married first before February 1, 1479-1480, Margaret, daughter of Patrick Hepburne, first Lord of Hailes, and widow of Patrick, third Lord Haliburton, and afterwards of Andrew Ker of Cessford. He married, second, Agnes Tod. He left issue by his first wife:

- 1. Alexander, who succeeded.
- 2. Hector.
- 3. Marion or Marjorie, married first as his second wife, before June 14, 1493, William, Master of Drummond, who died between July 1503 and July 1504; second, before February 1507-08, Sir James Sandilands of Calder.

By his second wife, he had a son:

4. John.

Alexander Forrester of Corstorphine had a charter of the barony and castle of Corstorphine on his father's resignation, probably about 1482, though the exact date is wanting. On January 2, 1493-94, he, as heir apparent of his father, had, along with his wife, a charter of the lands of Thirlestane, County Berwick, which his father resigned in his favor. He is styled fiar of Corstorphine, May 29, 1512, and of Corstorphine July 8, 1513. He had a charter to himself and his wife of the lands of Clerkington, July 7, 1516. On January 16, 1527-28, he was infeft as heir of his mother Margaret Hepburne. On September 12, 1533, he had a confirmation of Corstorphine with remainder to the heirs-male of his body, whom failing, to James Forrester of Meadowfield and similar heirs, whom failing, to the other series of heirs mentioned in the entail of 1430.

He married before January 1493-94, Margaret, said to have been a daughter of Sir Duncan Forrester of Garden. He was alive on January 13, 1538-39, when he resigned Corstorphine in favor of James Forrester of Meadowfield. He had a son by his wife:

- 1. Sir Walter, who died vita patris before September 16, 1533, leaving two daughters:
 - (1) Agnes, who married James Forrester of Meadowfield, afterwards of Corstorphine.
- (2) Janet, who on September 16, 1533, was contracted to the eldest son of Sir Thomas Erskine of Brechin, both being infants. The marriage never took effect.

James Forrester of Corstorphine, who succeeded Alexander as laird, is generally said to have been the son of the latter. He was, however, his grandson-in-law, having married, as stated above, his eldest granddaughter. His son James is styled pronevoy and heir of Alexander. He was probably the son of James Forrester of Meadowfield, who appears as a witness in 1470. As James Forrester of Meadowfield, he had, along with his wife Agnes on September 12, 1533, a grant of certain lands of Nether Barnton and others on the resignation of Alexander Forrester. At this time, they both must have been children. On March 28, 1536, he had a charter from James Douglas, Earl of Morton, of the lands of Fairliehope, County Peebles, also on the resignation of Alexander.

He is styled fiar of Corstorphine in a charter to him of the lands of Freirtoune in the regality of Broughton, County Edinburgh, by the Abbot of Holyrood, August 25, 1537, and on January 13, 1538-39, he had a charter of the barony of Corstorphine on the resignation of Alexander Forrester and of the lands of Thirlestane on the resignation of himself and his wife with reservation of life rents. He was killed at the battle of Pinkie, September 10, 1547.

His widow Agnes Forrester had a charter from Simon Preston apparently as his future wife, February 4, 1547-48. James Forrester left issue:

- 1. James, who succeeded.
- 2. Henry, who succeeded his brother.
- 3. Isobel, married by contract, January 22, 1574-75, to James Baillie, younger of Carphin.
- '4. Elizabeth, married by contract, May 11, 1557, to David MacGill of Nisbet, Cranston Riddell, and Drylaw, which last place she probably brought him as a marriage portion. She died in Edinburgh on March 16, 1578-79.

He also had a natural son:

5. James, who died January 1608.

James Forrester of Corstorphine and Janet Lauder, his wife, had a charter of the lands of West Craigs of Corstorphine and Clerkington, February 5, 1555-56. He is stated to have resigned these with the consent of his curators, which indicates that he was under age at the date mentioned. On March 2, 1564-65, he had a charter of certain portions of the lands of Lauriston, County Edinburgh, with half of the houses and gardens and the superiority of that portion of the lands which formed the terce of Katherine Forrester, probably the widow of Thomas Lauriston, on the resignation of his own brother Henry. He sold Lauriston on June 9, 1599, to Archibald Napier of Edenbellie and his wife Elizabeth Mowbray.

On August 2, 1571, as Sir James Forrester of Corstorphine, he granted to Janet Lauder, his wife, in implement of their marriage contract which was dated at Corstorphine the previous day, the lands of Nether Liberton, Nether Barnton, Easter Craigs and Meadowfield. It is probable that though Janet Lauder is mentioned as his wife as far back as 1556, they were only betrothed then, and that he did not married her until the latter date, or else, that it was a post nuptial contract. On March 31, 1582, he bought from John Mossman, goldsmith, the lands of Longhermiston and Currie.

James died June 4, 1589, when his brother was served heir to him. He married Janet Lauder, daughter of Robert Lauder of the Bass, but by her he had no male issue. She married, secondly, Sir John Campbell of Cawdor; thirdly, Mr. John Lindsay, parson of Menmuir; fourthly, Patrick Gray of Cransley, son of Patrick, Lord Gray. He had one daughter:

1. Geillis, married by contract February 10, 1579-80, to Sir Lewis Bellenden of Auchnoule, without issue.

He had a natural son:

2. Harry, apprenticed to Andrew Thomson, tailor, July 13, 1596.

Henry Forrester of Corstorphine was served heir to his brother, August 20, 1589. On December 21, 1598, he sold to John Moreson, merchant of Edinburgh, the Plewlands and Sacristan's lands, otherwise Broomhouse, the lands of Whitehouse at Corstorphine and the hill there. In 1600, the minister of Gogar, William Arthur, insisted that Henry should come to his church for hearing of the word and resolving all other benefits of the kirk. As Forrester had a very good parish kirk of his own, he, along with the provost, deacons, elders and other inhabitants appealed to the privy council, who sustained the appeal. He died after August 21, 1612, and before July 30, 1618, when his son is mentioned as laird. Henry married Helen Preston, said to have been of the Craigmillar family, who survived him and married secondly before 1625, William Borthwick, elder of Soutray. Henry left issue:

- 1. George, first Lord Forrester of Corstorphine.
- 2. David, a very wild youth. On April 20, 1612, he came to the house of Nicol Crawford in Nether Liberton, sought him everywhere to murder him, and missing him, gored and slew a horse standing in the stable, for all of which he was declared a rebel. There is another charge against him of getting drunk and making an uproar in the street after ten p.m.
 - 3. Henry.
 - 4. John.
 - 5. Sara, married by contract March 29, 1622, to John, youngest son of Thomas Inglis in Auldiston.
 - 6. Euphame, styled second daughter, February 12, 1620.
 - 7. Agnes.
 - 8.

George Forrester as heir apparent of his father, had, along with his wife, a grant of the lands of Clerkington and others November 15, 1607. He also, with consent of his parents and his wife, resigned the barony of Nether Liberton in favor of Mr. Alexander Gibson of Wester Granton, one of the clerks of Parliament, who on August 21, 1612, got a royal charter by which these lands were disjoined from the barony of Corstorphine and erected into a separate barony. On July 30, 1618, as Sir George Forrester of Corstorphine, he had a charter of novodamus of the lands and barony of Corstorphine by which the parish church was disjoined from the Abbey of Holyrood and made into a separate charge of which patronage was conferred on Sir George. He was served heir to his Uncle James on May 17, 1622, and was created a baronet November 17, 1625. He sat in Parliament for Edinburgh 1625 and 1628-33 and was sheriff of the county. On July 30, 1622, he resigned the superiority of Nether Earnton in favor of James Libberton, and on July 28, 1625, he acquired from the Archbishop of Glasgow certain lands in West Niddrie, County Linlithgow, and on the same day he had a charter of the barony of Gaughton, which had formed part of the great possessions of the Eellendens and which were now being broken up.

On July 22, 1633, he was created Lord Forrester of Corstorphine, with remainder to his heirs-male whomsoever. On March 29, 1634, he had a charter of the barony of Drummond or Drymen and of Airth to himself, his heirs male and assigns. In July 1634, Clerkington was sold to Lawrence Scot of Harperrig, but on July 18, 1635, Lord Forrester acquired the lands of Hayning, near Manuel, and the lands of Torheid, with the forest of the Torwood, which were erected into a barony of Torwoodheid. These lands were resigned by Sir William Ross of Murieston, who had married Margaret Forrester, daughter of Sir James Forrester of Torwoodheid, the head of another branch of the Forrester family. On August 21, 1643, Lord Forrester acquired from the Hamiltons the lands of Grange and Phillipston, County Linlithgow.

Toward the close of his life, Lord Forrester entered into certain important arrangements in regard to his title and estates, which it is necessary to mention in detail. Having no surviving male iscue, he resigned his estates of Corstorphine, Saughten and Torwoodheid in favor of James Baillie, eldest son of Major General William Eaillie of Lethame, who had married his fourth daughter Joanna. James Baillie got a charter of these lands March 1, 1650, Torwoodheid being destined to James Eaillie, his brothers William, Adam, Alexander, and the other sons of the Major General, and heirs-male of their bodies, whom failing, to the heirs whomsoever of James. Corstorphine and the rest of the lands were provided to James Paillie and the heirs-male to be procreated between himself and his wife Jean Forrester, bearing the name and arms of Forrester; whom failing, to William Baillie and similar heirs of himself and his future wife Lilias, Lord Forrester's fifth daughter; whom failing, to the senior heir-female, without division, of James and Jean and the heirs of her bedy; whom failing to their other daughters successively without division; whom failing, to similar heirs of William and Lilias; whom failing, to the heirs of line of said James.

In the following year, Lord Forrester resigned his peerage and obtained a re-grant thereof July 5, 1651, with a similar limitation. Lord Forrester died in 1654.

Here, in deference to history and George, Lord Forrester's, part in it, we will recount some of the events of his life and the misfortunes which befell the house of Forrester.

After the parliamentary party headed by Cromwell broke off their understanding with the Scots and the execution of the gallant Montrose followed that of Charles I of England in 1449, the party of the Duke of Argyll became supreme in Scotland. Charles II was acclaimed king at the Cross of Edinburgh on his consenting with great reluctance to sign the covenant.

This forced Cromwell to come north with horse and artillery and ten companies of the Monk's Regiment, now the Coldstream Guards. His objective was the capture of Edinburgh. After pushing on from Berwick, he reached Musselburgh, but when he attempted to make a direct attack on the capital, the Scots leader, General David Leslie, kept him marching and countermarching. On August 13, 1650, Cromwell encamped his army of 16,000 men on the ridge between the Braid Hills and Fairmilehead. His next move was to turn westward. First of all, he laid siege to Redhall, near Slateford. It was gallantly defended by the laird and 60 men, although cannonaded for six hours. Cromwell also "encampit a great number of his sodgeris about it with pike and musket, but to lytel purpose; for the laird and the pepil in the house defendit valiantly ever till thair powder failed; and after it failed, they did not give over, ever lucking for help from our awin airmy, wha was then lying at Crostorfyn, within twa myle to the house; of whas help thai war disappointed".

It is obvious that if Leslie had tried to raise the siege, he would have played into the hands of the enemy.

On August 27, Cromwell proceeded further westward with the object of cutting off Leslie's supplies from that direction. Leslie's headquarters were at Corstorphine castle, and his men were camped on the adjacent meadow.

"The Scots airmy being put in some readyness marched up to Crostorfyn hill, but because the English feared it war too near the castle of Edinburgh, they would not hazard battail there; whereof, both airmies marched to Gogar." Leslie entrenched his men in the widespread marshy ground there, thus taking the English cavalry at a disadvantage. When the English guns flashed, they were surprised at the murderous fire of the cannon, which had been newly invented by the Scots' general of artillery Colonel Wemyss. The battle lasted for several hours, and after a loss of 100 men killed and wounded on both sides, Cromwell had to admit defeat, and he retired by his "leager at Braidshill" to Dunbar.

One of the minor factors which led to his retiral was that he could not find any fodder at Gogar for his tired horses as James Baillie of Corstorphine, castle and Air John Cowper of Gogar House had had the foresight to order their servants to harvest their crops a few days before the battle.

If Leslie's plans at Dunbar had not been spoilt by the interference of the clergy, Cromwell would have been worsted by his opponent's strategy and compelled to reembark for Enalgnd as he was on the point of doing. Now, however, he advanced on Edinburgh, occupied it and Leith, and secured possession of the castle.

For the next ten years, the country was placed under martial law, the General Assembly was dispensed, and the pulpits of the churches were occupied by the narrow minded Puritan soldier-preachers. As a consequence, their warped mentality heavily leavened Scottish life, and a marked decline set in as regards the taste and beauty of worship and church. It has taken Scotland centuries to make up the leeway.

During this period, Corstorphine fared badly. The laird and the minister had to fly for their lives, and the church and castle of Corstorphine were to know the Ironsides until August 1651.

While these "soldier saints" were billeted in the church, they wrecked their vengeance on the interior. In particular, they defaced the effigy of Sir John Forrester, the younger. They also laid waste the estate of the Forresters.

After the Ironsides left the village, the laird and the ministers were gladly welcomed back by the people, and willing hands soon repaired the damage to the church.

Evidently the strain of recent events had sapped the strength of Lord Forrester as it did that of the minister, and they both died in the same year, 1654.

Lord Forrester married by contract November 27 and December 1, 1606, Christian, daughter of Sir William Livingston of Kilsyth, and had by her the following children:

- 1. John, Master of Forrester, who married in 1634, Agnes, daughter of Sir Alexander Falconer of Halkerton, and widow of Sir Alexander Keith of Benholm. He did vita patria and s.p.
- 2. Helen, married as his second wife, William, tenth Lord Ross.
- 3. Margaret, married first to Alexander Telfer of Redhouse, burgess of Edinburgh; second, to John Schaw of Sornberg.
- 4. Christian, married first by contract February 7 and 8, 1631, to James Hamilton of Grange, with issue a daughter Christian mentioned later; second, to John Wauch.

- 5. Joanna, married by contract December 15, 1649, to James Baillie, eldest son of Major General William Baillie of Lethame. They succeeded under the above mentioned deeds.
- 6. Lilias, born September 18, 1634, married William Baillie, the second son of Major General Baillie.

The manner in which Lord Forrester set his house in order has always proved a mystery. By a charter of March 1, 1650, he practically disinherited his three eldest daughters and handed over the extensive estates of Corstorphine, Saughton and Torwoodheid to James Baillie, the husband of his fourth daughter and their heirs, and such failing, to his brother William Baillie and his future bride, the fifth daughter. That this course of action was not done hastily is confirmed by Lord Forrester's resignation of his title a year later on July 6, 1651, when he obtained a re-grant of the peerage in favor of James Baillie, who assumed the name of Forrester and was known as the Master of Forrester until the death of his father-in-law when he became James, Lord Forrester.

James Baillie, as was previously stated, was the eldest son of General Baillie of Lethame by his wife Janet Bruce. Janet married, secondly, Sir Richard Nasmyth of Passo and separated from him. General Baillie himself was the natural son of Sir William Baillie of Lamington by a daughter of Sir Alexander Home of North Berwick, whom Sir William afterwards married, but his son being born during his former marriage was not thereby ligitimated.

After the death of the first Lord Forrester, James Baillie found himself in possession of the title and the extensive estates of the family under the arrangements mentioned above. In 1652, a son was born to them, but he died in infancy, and Janet Forrester herself did not long survive.

Her husband married again before July 1661, Janet, daughter and co-heir of Patrick, Earl of Forth and Brentford, by his first wife Jane Henderson.

A zealous loyalist, Lord Forrester was fined 2,500 pounds sterling under Cromwell's Act of Grace and Indomnification. But he was a man of extravagant habits and dissolute life. He had seduced his niece Christian Hamilton, daughter of the Hamiltons of Grange. Christian had married, contrary to the wishes of her family, an Edinburgh burgess, James Nimmo.

Mrs. Nimmo was a woman of violent temper, and having quarreled with Lord Forrester, she, on August 26, 1679, stabled him with his own sword in the garden of Corstorphine. He died immediately, and she was speedily captured and put in prison. On September 29, she succeeded in escaping, but on the next day was taken again. On November 12, she was executed at the Cross of Edinburgh.

James Baillie, Lord Forrester, had by his first wife Jonet Forrester, one son:

1. William, born February 8, 1652, died in infancy.

By his second wife, he had a family who all took the name of their mother, Ruthven:

- 2. Charles, born July 21, 1661, died young.
- 3. Edward, born February 19, 1663, an officer in the Life Guards. He is styled Earl of Brawfoord (Brentford), October 12, 1674. This was the title of his grandfather who died in 1651, but he had no right to it. He married Martha Temple, who had an allowance of 200 pounds a year out of the lands of Corstorphine. He died in 1682.
- 4. John, born May 9, 1666, died young.
- 5. Clara, born January 16, 1665. She married first, October 11, 1683, Andrew Dick, advocate; second, to _____ Murray of Spot.
 - 6. Patricia, born October 28, 1668; was living in 1694.

William Baillie, brother of the foregoing, de jure third Lord Forrester, was born December 12, 1632. Under the re-grant of 1651, he was entitled to the dignity, but never assumed the title. He married, as before stated, Lilias, youngest daughter of the first Lord Forrester, and died in May 1681, having had by her a son:

1. William, who succeeded.

This William was the fourth Lord Forrester. His vote for a member of Parliament was objected to in 1681, after his father's death, on the grounds that he was a peer. He disclaimed his peerage, but as he styled himself Lord Forrester of Corstorphine, he was ordered by Parliament and the Privy Council to relinquish the title till he had instructed his right. Then, but not till then, did he produce on August 31, 1698, the re-grant of 1651, which was ordered to be recorded. The right under the re-grant of 1651 does not seem to have been known during the lifetime of James, the second Lord, as the pretensions of the latter to the peerage were questioned in 1676.

William died in 1705, having married before 1684. Margaret, born April 14, 1661, daughter of Sir Andrew Birnie of Saline, one of the judges of the Court of Session. By Margaret, William had the following children:

1. Andrew, born May 11, 1686, died an infant.

- 2. George, fifth Lord Forrester.
- 3. William, born September 6, 1689, died young.
- 4. Andrew (secundus) born March 27, 1692, a major in the Horse Guards, died unmarried.
- 5. James, born October 7, 1695, a lieutenant in the navy, died unmarried.
- 6. John, a captain in the navy March 6, 1728. He was a commander of H. M. S. Kinsale and died on the Isle of Pinos near Cuba, January 12, 1737. He married Elizabeth, sister of Sir Charles Tyrrel and had by her a son:
 - (1) William, who succeeded as seventh Lord Forrester.
- 7. Janet, the eldest of the family, born November 21, 1684, died young.
- 8. Janet, (secundus) born October 28, 1690, died unmarried.

- 10. Lilias, married to William Stirling of Herbertshire, County Stirling.

George, the fifth Lord Forrester, born March 23, 1688, succeeded his father in 1705 and voted at the general election of Scottish Representative Peers in 1706; but as he was then a minor, his vote was set aside by the House of Lords. He served in the army under Malborough. He was lieutenant colonel of the 26th Foot (Cameronians) at the battle of Preston, November 13, 1715, and was wounded there; he was colonel of the 30th Foot January 1716; of the second troop of Horse Grenadier Guards, July 17, 1717; and of the fourth or Scottish troops of the same regiment April 1719, in which position he remained till his death in France February 17, 1726-27.

He married in or before 1724, Charlotte, daughter and co-heir of Anthony Rowe of Oxfordshire. She was a lady of the bedchamber to the Princess of Orange. She died in Holland in February 1742-43. By her, he had issue:

- 1. George, sixth Lord Forrester.
- 2. Caroline, Baroness Forrester.

- 3. Harriet, married to Edward Walter of Stalbridge, County Dorset, M. P. for Milborne Port 1754-74. She died in Bruton Street, London, March 5, 1795, leaving one daughter:
- (1) Harriett Walter, married July 28, 1774, to James Bucknell (Grimston), third Viscount Grimston in the peerage of Ireland. He was created July 8, 1790, Baron Virulam of Gorhambury in the peerage of Great Britain and died December 30, 1808. She died November 7, having had issue:

George, sixth Lord Forrester, was appointed lieutenant in the navy in 1735, captain September 24, 1740, and commander in 1744. In March 1746, he was tried by court martial and cashiered. He died unmarried at Staines, June 26, 1748.

William, seventh Lord Forrester, who succeeded as heir-male, was the only son of John Forrester, the sixth and youngest son of the fourth lord. He died at Calne, Wilts, November 1763, having married a lady whose christian name was Hannah. She survived him many years and died at Calne November 15, 1825, age 84. They had no issue, and the succession opened, the heirs-male of the fourth lord having become extinct, to Caroline, suo jure Baroness Forrester, the elder daughter of the fifth lord.

She succeeded under the regrant of 1651 as heir of the line of the fifth lord. She married her cousin George Cockburn of Ormiston, son of John Cockburn. Cockburn had married as his second wife Isabella Rowe, sister of Charlotte Rowe, the wife of the fifth Lord Forrester. George Cockburn was comptroller of the Navy in 1756 and died at Brighton July 13, 1770. The Baroness survived him 14 years and died in London on February 25, 1784. They had issue:

James Walter (Grimston), the grandson of Harriett Forrester, youngest daughter of George, fifth Lord Forrester, was born September 26, 1775, and succeeded his cousin as eighth holder of the title of Lord Forrester of Corstorphine in 1808.

About three weeks later, December 30, 1808, he succeeded his father as Baron Verulam of Gorhambury. On November 24, 1815, he was created Viscount Grimston and Earl of Verulam. He married August 11, 1807, Charlotte, only daughter of Charles, first Earl of Liverpool, and died November 17, 1845, at Gorhambury. His widow died April 16, 1863, in her eightieth year. CREATIONS

On July 22, 1633, Lord Forrester of Corstorphine was created in the peerage of Scotland; May 29, 1719, Baron Dundoyne and Viscount Grimston, in the peerage of Ireland; July 8, 1790, Baron Verulam and Gorhambury, in the peerage of Great Britain; November 24, 1885, Viscount Grimston and Earl of Verulam in the peerage of the United Kingdom.

ARMS

These are not recorded in the Lyon Register, and many variations are to be found. The chevron borne on his shield by Sir Adam Forrester was dropped by the succeeding generations, and the majority of the sixteenth and seventeenth century armorial MSS. give the arms simply as Argent, three hunting horns gules, which is followed by the draughtsman of the "Peers' Arms" MS. and by Pont, save that the latter makes the fess sable. Nisbet gives the arms with the fess gules as belonging to the Lord Forrester of his day. But another version given in "Peers' Arms" has the following: Quarterly, first and fourth, paly of six argent and gules, in a dexter canton of the first a gillyflower within a double treasure flory counterflory of the second, for Livingstone and Kilsyth; second and third, argent, three hunting horns sable garnished vert stringed gules, for Forrester; overall on an escutcheon of pretence, sable, nine stars—three, three, two and one, for Baillie.

CREST

A hound's head erased proper was borne by Sir James Forrester in 1547, but in "Peers' Arms" above quoted, it is given in one version as a demi-goat proper, chained gules, collared, horned and unguled and in another as a hound's head erased or collared gules.

SUPPORTERS

Nisbet says that Sir Archibald Forrester's seal in 1482 had as supporters two dogs. The Forman (Lyon Office) MS. gives the supporters as a beagle on the dexter and a greyhound on the sinister, both collared gules, and Nisbet says that these were the supporters of the Lord Forrester of his day. This version is followed by the second representation in "Peers' Arms", but in the first are given two goats chained, collared, horned and unguled as in the crest.

MOTTO

With the goat crest is given, "The deed shal show"; with the hound's crest, "Blaw hunter, blaw thy horn".

We do not know if any of the flowers of Sir Adam's seed still flourish; we do know that he had antecedents. We also know that he bore the name Forrester with great humor and distinction of which any Forrester can be proud.

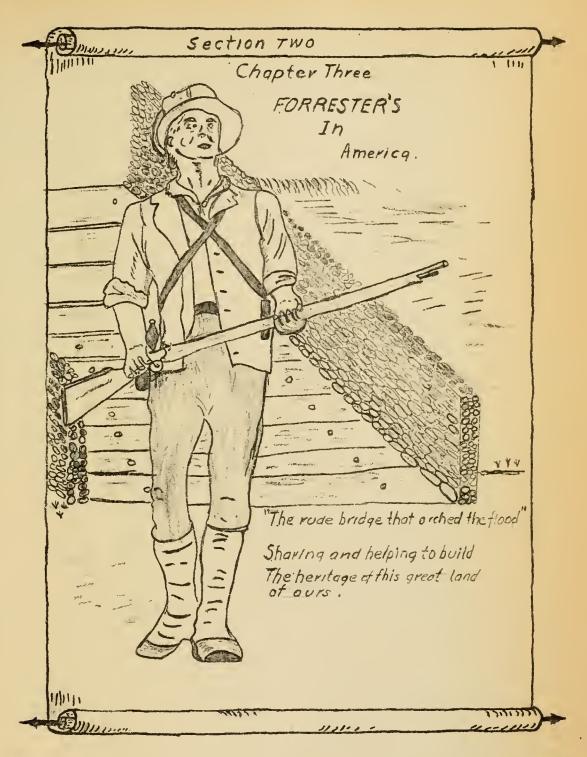

Certainly, the recording of his line will set the compass for future research.

The author is indebted to D. M. Thomson and to Sir J. Balfour Paul for much of the narrative and the genealogy cited in this chapter.

Chapter III

FORRESTERS IN AMERICA

The preceding chapters show the general character and temperament of the people who began the House of Forrester. The history of the clan tells us that in Flanders and the British Isles, Forresters sprang from sturdy stock which was blended down through the ages with noble and yeoman blood. Through the blending of these bloods, the Forresters inherited the aggressive leadership of the noblemen and the law-abiding husbandry of the yeoman. These traits enabled them to take their place among others of the same ilk in the task of carving a new nation from the Americas.

Many things must have influenced our immigrant ancestors to leave their native lands. Like many others, they must have surely been searching for a better life -- a life of freedom; however, aside from political considerations, the full ownership of land was probably the predominating influence. From the earliest beginnings, Forresters have exhibited a love for the land and have established their roots deeply in the soil.

As we have seen in earlier chapters, the urgings for land started the migrations of the most ancient ancestors of the clan. The need for land furnished the impetus for the Celts and Teutons to leave Germany and migrate to the Middle East, and from there to France, from France to Flanders, and finally to England, Scotland, and Ireland.

If allowances are made for the difference in locale and the changes in customs, the history of Forresters in America is merely a repetition of the habits and general character of the ancients.

Here in America, Forresters followed the migratory trend which led to the development of this country. According to the records available, the first Forresters in America came to four places -- Boston, Delaware, Virginia, and Pennsylvania.

The records indicate that they settled mostly on the land. As the coastal areas became more populous, their eyes turned westward. Being met by mountains and hostile Indians, the original inland migrants turned North and South.

Later, as the land toward the west opened up as a result of Indian wars and the treaties which followed, Forresters gradually migrated to all parts of the present United States.

The American Forresters have tended to exhibit three basic characteristics; a love of the land and an innate sense of stewardship, an acceptance of civic responsibility, and a love of freedom and the courage to fight for it.

Even though the people of the family were originally children of the soil, they have always been active in civic leadership and public service.

Since colonial days, Forresters in America have exhibited a propensity to educate their children; consequently, we find Forresters today in every walk of life. Numbered among the clan are ministers, missionaries, doctors, teachers, lawyers, public servants, engineers, scientists, carpenters, masons, nurses, merchants, and scores of other professions.

Like our ancient ancestors, Forresters in America have responded to the call to bear arms in the defense of their native land. This applies to the daughters of the clan as well as the sons. A number of Forresters have been and still are professional soldiers of note, but as a rule, when wars were ended, Forresters have mostly returned to their families.

Because of the vast number of Forresters throughout the United States, it would be impossible at this time to write a composite history of Forresters in America. Not enough time has elapsed since the first immigrant came to America to enable us to look at the history of the clan in America in retrospect.

This retrospective history is being written now; posterity will write the verdict. An expose of what this verdict will be is clearly indicated in the chronological listings in Section 3 and the Public Service listings in Section 4.

Our object here is to search out the ancestral lineage of persons responsible for planting the seed of Forrester on these shores; therefore, it is no doubt appropriate to list the immigrants to America, known to us at this time.

1. WILLIAM FORRESTER

(Date is taken from an old diary of an E. A. Forrester written about 1864.)

William Forrester of the city of Berwick upon Tweed was a minister of the Church of England, a man of large landed property. On his expulsion from the Church of England in 1638 A.D., he returned with his family to Londonderry in Ireland where he was rector of the Cathedral of St. Columby. He continued in this office until his death and was succeeded by his son Alexander in 1676.

Alexander had two sons, Matthewand William The eldest (supposedly Matthew) died in childhood. William moved to the city of Coleraine and was mayor of that city for seven years.

William had three sons and five daughters. The eldest child died in infancy, the second, Robert, had four sons and one daughter; the third, Frederick had three sons and three daughters. William's other children were Elizabeth, Martha, Mary, Ann, and Catherine.

Robert's children were William, Arthur, Alexander, Anthony, and Mary.

Frederick's children by his wife Ione Gault, were William, Arthur John, Ann, Ione, and Martha.

Frederick's son William, and Arthur, his brother, sailed from Coleraine, Ireland, on August 29, 1762, and landed at New Castle on the Delaware in America on October 27, 1762. (Note: This William is the person from whose diary this data was copied.)

Leaving New Castle, William and Arthur went to New York, arriving there on November 7, 1762. After a short sojourn in New York, they moved to Redysfield in the state of Connecticut and settled there in November, 1762.

2. WILLIAM FORESTER

(Data furnished by American descendents. (See Line C)

William Forester was born on the West Coast of Scotland in the middle eighteenth century, When the American Revolution broke out, he joined the army of King George III. William was sent to the American colonies in 1777. After fighting the rebellionists for a short time, he realized their trouble and joined them. After the war, he could not return to his homeland because of the part he played in the Revolution. A short time later, he entered into wedlock with Jennet McGhee, also from Scotland. Jennet gave him ten children. (See Line C)

3. AARON FORRESTER (See Line O)

Best available records indicate that Aaron was born in England and that he may have settled originally in Hagerstown, Maryland. He is shown in the 1790 census to be in Horse Valley, Pennsylvania.

4. GEORGE FORRESTER (See Line I)

George was born in England and was a clergyman of the Church of England. He migrated to America and settled in Maryland.

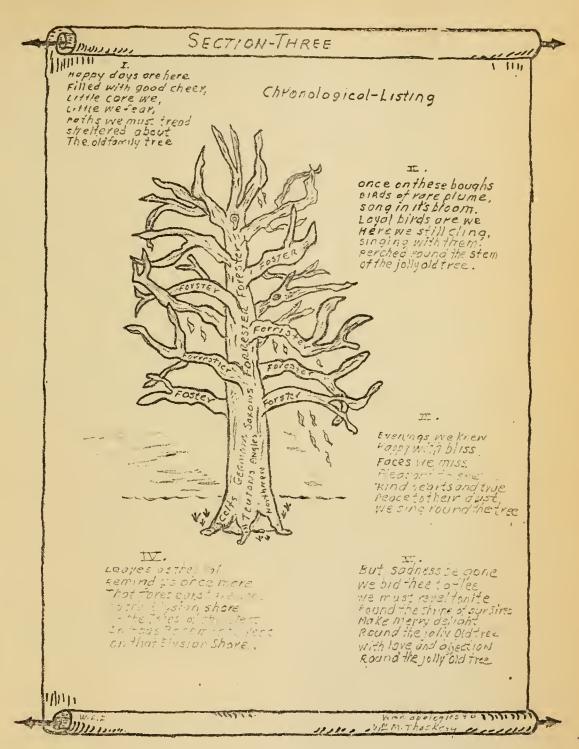

- 5. Incomplete records indicate that a John Forster immigrated from England to Ireland in the year 1680, and changed his name to Foster. The source also states that this three sons, Alexander, Thomas, and William, came to America and settled in Lancaster, Co., Pennsylvania. The record suggests that these people belong to Line A.
- 6. TOBY FORESTER, 1655, transported by Mr. Thomas Ballard of Gloucester Co., Virginia. (Early Virginia Immigrants, 1623-1688, by George Cobel Greer.)
 - 7. JOHN FORRESTER (Virginia Colonial Abstracts, Vol 19 pp50)
- 8. SEAGEANT and WILLIAM FOSTER, came to America in 1634, on the ship, Hercules, and settled in Mass. (not authenticated)
- 9. THOMAS FORRESTER, of the Corstorphine Forresters, and who was created a Baronet in 1625, by James the First of Scotland, had a son, Simon. Simon immigrated to America in a vessel commanded by Capt. Daniel Hawthorn (a privateer). This Simon Forrester married Raechal Hawthorn, the aunt of Nathaniel Hawthorn. Simon died without male issue. (Prominent American Families, copy on file Georgia Dept. of Archives)

A number of other Forresters by all spellings are numbered among the early immigrants to America, but in the absence of more detailed information, they are not listed at this time.

For the benefit of future research, it might be well to remark that the ancient Georgia Gazzette, printed in Savannah, Georgia, makes mention of a goodly number of Forresters (ship commanders) engaged in coast wise American shipping in early colonial days.

LINE A

NOTE: The following genealogical data was furnished by Mrs. Lela Forester Stafft of Cottonwood, California. The information was compiled by William T. Foster of Washington, D. C. and was secured by Mrs. Delia Forester Clayton and sent to Lela Forester Stafft. The data is included in a book published by William T. Foster in 1916, copies of which were deposited in the Congressional Library, Washington, D. C., the public library in Springfield, Illinois, and at St. Joseph, Missouri. It is being reproduced here, because it is the only line which is available going back to the founder of the name. It will therefore serve as a guide for research which may be performed by future generations. It will also serve to show the practical application of the system of listing used in this book.

Commentary on D-7: Charlie Forrester was known as Scott County's "Best Friend". Losing his mother at the age of four weeks, he was given the love and care of his maternal grandmother, Pamilia Holley Gains, who later married a Mr. Stall. Charlie's grandmother was a devout christian lady originally from Virginia, and her christian teachings were the guiding light in his later life. At one time, Charlie Forrester owned all the land acreage in Scott Co., Ark.; as a result, his name appears on nearly all original deeds in that county. He was a great leader in the community and was widely known as a banker, merchant, industrialist and financier. Even though he was a man of great wealth, he was a friend to rich and poor alike. He was a christian gentleman and a devout member of the Methodist Church, but his philanthropy reached all denominations, as well as all segments of Scott County civic endeavor. Having been deprived of a high school education, he had a determined purpose to see that the children of Scott County would have the opportunity to get an education. As a consequence, he gave time, money and many acres of land for the purpose of building Scott County schools. In recognition of his outstanding contribution, the people of Waldron and Scott County honored him in naming the new elementary school built in 1963, the "C. E. Forrester Elementary School". The people of Scott County remember Charlie Forrester as truly "one of nature's noblemen."

NOTE 1) Data on this line furnished by Lela Forester Miller Stafft, copied from letters written by members of the family and sent to Mrs. Stafft by Mrs. Nora Forrester Alren, P.O. Box 5-C, Dupree, S.D. (1966). The data is from old family records, and personal knowledge of members of the family.

NOTE 2) Newspaper clipping: "Papes Translation of Iliad Exhibited, Baltimore, Maryland, July 22 --? Attorney Rappington is exhibiting to his friends a copy of Alexander Pape's translation of Homer's Iliad, first printed in 1720. It comprises four volumes, and was presented by Pape shortly after publication to Rev. George Forrester, one of the first clergymen of the Church of England to settle in the Colony of Maryland. When Mr. George Forrester came to this country, he brought the books with him. Shortly before his death he gave the books to the grandfather of Judge James A. Pearce. Judge Pearce sent them to Mr. Sappington." This copied from an old clipping taken from the records of Hattie, and George Forrester, and given to Nora Forrester Alsen by her father, Eddafanso Beltram Forrester. Mrs. Olsen states that the data on her great-grandparents was taken from records of the Morman Church, in Salt Lake City, Utah.

NOTE 3) This data copied from a letter dated 31 March 1947, from Myrtle Williams Darling to Duke Forrester, we give excerpts; "Taking the Bible as topic 1) - I have Bible." It came from the Langhead family. (Lan-heed) sometimes spelled Lockhead (Scotch) or Lakehead (English)."

"The family was Scotch Presbyterian, sailed from Ireland as a missionary to Canada to work among the Indians." The Bible contains records of marriages etc., covered in the genealogical listings recorded here. The Forresters later by reason of being soldiers for hundreds of years, were granted land in the state of New York. The land, comprised of sixteen townships, was later confiscated (presumably during the Revolution) and the family banished to Canada.

NOTE: The chronological listings of some of the people from N-183 to N-207 inclusive, on the basis of data submitted is not clear in all instances. It is included here in the form submitted, and it will no doubt be of value for records. Also persons in possession of questionable links, will perhaps send them to the Association.

The following data and comments were sent in by Mrs. Esther Forrester Everett N-159.

"Records from Wilkes Co., N.C. Court House show earliest Forester settlers in Wilkes County following 1790 Census.

I. Fielding Forester: Male over 16-1, males under 16-0, females all ages-1, slaves-0.

II. John Forester, males over 16-1, males under 16-3, females all ages 4, slaves-0.

III. Charles Forester, males over 16-1, males under 16-3, females all ages 5, slaves-0.

Mrs. Everett-reports further she had following report from a professional geneologist, Mr. Ovey Moore, residing at 301, Kensington Ave., N. Wilkesboro, N.C.

"After searching county records of Wilkesboro, it looks as if the John and Charles Foresters were the founders of the Forester Family in Wilkes Co. - as Fielding Forester apparently had no children. I would be enclined to believe he was a son of either John or Charles. Charles gave power of attorney in 1825, at time he was living in Smith Co., Tenn. John and Charles could have been brothers. Register of Deeds Office, Wilkes Co. shows Fielding Forester having bought property from James Hays. Deed Book D - Page 811 in 1800

Charles Forester gave to George Bernes, Power of Attorney Book L-PP. 162 in 1825, being of Smith Co. State of Tenn.

The Marriage Records of Wilkes Co., N.C. show Fielding Forester as a bondsman when John Forester married Milley Forester. 13 Feby 1800."

John Baillie (1767-1819), oldest son of Robert Baillie and Ann Mackintosh, had a son Robert Granberry Baillie (1787-1862) who returned to Scotland to claim the family estate which came to him on the death of his uncle.

This estate was Culter (sometimes written Culter Allers) near Biggar, B.W. Scotland. NOTE: In one letter it is Culter House, but it is never Coulter.)

Robert Granberry Baillie married Anna Baillie, daughter of Mungie Baillie (Robert Baillie's brother) and Ann Hodgson, his wife. Two sons were born of this marriage: James W. Baillie (b. 1824) and John Baillie (b. 1826).

James W. Baillie (b. 1824) m. Minna : there were no children of this union. John Baillie (b. 1826) had three children:

- 1. Cecelia Baillie (known as "Cecy") who married a Mr. Duncan and had 3 ch.
- 2. Robert Baillie
- 3. Ann Euphemia Baillie m. Mr. Scott

On the death of James W. Baillie (b. 1824) his younger brother, John Baillie inherited Culter.

1824-1840--and from James W. Baillie and Minna, his wife, in the 1870's. These letters were addressed to members of the Forrester family.

Robert G. Baillie's letters mention the fact that the person to whom the letter was addressed was living with his parents when they died in 1819.

James W. Baillie and his wife Minna came to Georgia to see their kin.

In one of Minna's letters (1876) she says they are going to build a house and call it BAGBIE after the ancestral home in Scotland and after which his grandfather named his plantation near Darien. (Letter written from Croydon, England.)

Robert Baillie of Georgia (son of Robert Baillie and his wife Catherine Dunbar) was born in Scotland; died in Georgia after the Revolution.

In 1751 Robert Baillie married Ann Mackintosh at the home of her father, John Mackintosh Mohr, near Darion. In Baldwin County, Georgia, history appears the interesting story of their courtship written by one of the descendants, a great-granddaughter of Judge and Mrs. Harris of Milledgeville, Ga. copied from old family papers. An extract of the letter written by Robert Baillie in which he is urging his suit and reminding his "Dear Miss Nancy" that "she had said she had no objection to his person", and adds "that she can have none to his character". Her answer to him is intact and reads as follows:

"To Robert Baillie, Esq., at Barrington.
"Sir:

"I have the honor of yours by Jack. As to answer, I told you here it should be done in the privatest manner. I expect no person to be evidences but my Brothers and Sisters you may acquaint them when you think proper. I remain sir your constant servant.

Ann Mackintosh"

Writing in 1840 Robert G. Baillie acknowledges receipt of his father's watch which had been sent him by Mr. Forrester "which as it had been so long in the possession of the family I had a great desire to have..."

Mr. and Mrs. C. Spalding were Edinburgh and Mr. Baillie sent Mr.

Tuck Praises Forrester's Rights Attack

Congressman W M Tuck, a former governor of Virginia, has congratulated Congressman E. L. (Tic) Forrester of Leesburg for a ringing speech attacking the civil rights bill 1 for which the House of Repre- il sentatives gave the latter an unusual standing ovation last

The Virginian described the Georgian's address as "unquestionably the best I have heard in that hody during the 1t years I have been here." He added:

"The House and galleries were both packed and jammed You received rapt attention and one could literally have heard a pin drop during your 35 min-

"When you had concluded, the entire body arose and applauded vigorously. It was a tribute which you richly merited and deserved. Your speech was chock full of sound sense and logic and was delivered so feelingly and so eloquently that all were impressed with your sincerity, your candor and your honesty. You marshaled your thoughts in a skillful and dexterous manner and presented them most forcefully.

"I have heard many members of Congress on both sides of the aisle say that your speech was decidedly the best one made on the subject at any time since the (civil rights) debate had been going on.

"I am sure that you know that it is a joy and a pleasure for me to serve in the Congress with one of your character, capabilities and courage, and particularly it is a pleasure to be associated with you in membertee."

(William Forrester was murdered 5 Nov. 1723 by Thomas Glascock. There is considerable in detail in the volume called Fines, Examination of Criminals, Tryals of Slaves &c: 3710-1754, page 67 et seq. Gergory Clascock, son of Thomas Clascock, was named as an accussory in this crime and the matter was heard before the General Court of Virginia sitting in Williamsburg. In his last will and Testament, Colonel Robert Carter (1663-1732) of Corotoman, Lancaster County, referes to the land of Thomas Glascock of Richmond County). page 71.

Excerpt from htr. Patsy Forrester

This past summer while I was in Roston, Machachusetts, I took a Gray Line Tour to Salem. We went into the House of Seven Gables. The guide there called attention to a portrait on the wall in one of the rooms and stated that was Mrs. Forrester, the aunt of Nathaniel Hawthrone. I asked the guide if she knew what Mrs. Forrester and her only reply was that that was all she was told. There was a large crowd there, it was late and the tours give you only a certain length of time, so I did not find out anything further. Do you show any connections in Massachusetts?

LEESBURG - Nearly 200 members of a prominent Georgia fam- Forresters' Scottish coat of arms ily gathered here last week to participate in the first of regularly scheduled family reunions. They were descendants of Joel Forrester, coming to Leesburg from

Among the Forresters present was E. L. (Tic) Forrester, a mem-ber of the House of Representatives from Georgia's Third Congressional District, of which Leasburg is a part. Others present included attorneys, clergymen, business and professional people from Georgia, Alabama, Florida and North Carolina.

The Forresters are direct descendants of Scottish nobility. The family settled in South Georgia near the beginning of the 19th Century. Many landmarks and parts of history in this section are attributable to the Forresters.

Edward Forrester, furnituro merchant of Leesburg, was elected chairman of the raunions. A committee was appointed to decide on the next reunion date. Mrs. Fred W. "I spent a week in Edinburgh during the Festivel and gathered some information which I hope will be helpful. I suggest that if you haven't done so that you read the Forrester genealogy in the Scottish Peerage, edited by Sir J. Balfour Paul, Edinburgh 1904-1914. The very complete genealogy for several hundred years after Sir Adam is given in Volume IV, pp 80-100. Forresters several times have been married to Stewarts. I assume that a Forrester descendant would have a right to the Stewart tartan, as the claim passed through the female line. There are six different Stewart tertons, however."
